Diggers search

Site Director Mike Southard of East Prairie looks over a recently exposed area of the Towasohgy State Archaeological Site as student workers dig on other parts of the Indian settlement. Jim Porter, left, of the University of Oregon and Bill Ganzer of Southern Illinois University are two of the crew who are trying to unlock the secrets of the Indian city that once flourished about 10 miles east of East Prairie. One of the site mounds rises behind the men. (Daily Standard photo)

Hard, hot work

Most of the work done by students like Ganzer, left, and Porter consists of hard and hot digging to carefully expose the structure of the Indian town. The depressions near the men are profile cuts of possible wall posts that will be studied in the site lab when digging season ends this summer. The site is open to visitors Monday through Friday until 1:30 p.m. It can be reached by driving east on Highway 80 from East Prairie, then south for about five miles on Mississippi County Routes AA and FF. A Gravel fork leads east for one mile from Route FF, then south one mile to the site. (Daily Standard photo)

Boy recovers from rabies

MEXICO CITY, Mexico (AP) — A Mexican doctor said Friday a 4-year-old patient of his recovered from rabies and the case could point the way to a less painful vaccine or even a cure for the disease.

Dr. Enrique Cifuentes visited the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., Friday with blood and urine specimens he had isolated from the boy.

CDC officials would not comment on the case.

On his return from Atlanta, Dr. Cifuentes said he hoped the case would lead to major strides in antirabies treatment.

Government rests its case against Ehrlichman

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government rested its conspiracy case against John D. Ehrlichman and three former White House "plumbers" Friday, and the judge left open the possibility that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger may still be called as a defense witness.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell also turned down for the second time a set of written questions defense lawyers want to submit to President Nixon for sworn answers, saying they did not meet the court's guidelines.

Gesell said such sworn statements had been asked of presidents only two or three times in American history and he would allow them only if the information can't be obtained another way and if the information is absolutely essential to the trial.

However, Gesell left open the possibility that he might still sign an order sending the interrogatories to the White House if the defense can come up with a list of questions which meet his standards. He did not reveal what the questions are other than to indicate that several involve minor details for which he said answers already were avialable.

Lawyers for Ehrlichman indicated they might try again to come up with acceptable questions. If the questions are sent to the President and he heeds the court order to answer them, the answers could then be read to the jury.

As the prosecution rested its case after calling 16 witnesses in 4½ days, Gesell indicated he may drop one of the four perjury counts leveled against Ehrlichman alone.

And he warned the lawyers for the former Nixon domestic aide against attempting to show that the President gave instructions to withhold information about the Ellsberg break-in case from the grand jury that indicted the four defendants.

"If those orders were given, they were illegal orders and I will so instruct the jury," Gesell said.

The exchange was out of the jury's hearing as Gesell asked Ehrlichman's lawyers their justification for calling Asst. Atty. Gen. Henry E. Petersen as one of the lead-off witnesses.

William S. Frates, who heads Ehrlichman's four-lawyer team, said there had been testimony that Ehrlichman gave instructions to plumbers co-directors Egil Krogh Jr., and David R. Young not to talk about the break-in.

Ehrlichman, Bernard L. Barker, Eugenio R. Martinez and G. Gordon Liddy are charged with conspiring "to injure, oppress, threaten and intimidate Dr. Lewis J. Fielding" in the Sept. 3-4, 1971 break-in of his office.

Fielding had treated Daniel Ellsberg, the Rand Corporation analyst who had leaked the Pentagon Papers study of the Vietnam war to newspapers. The object of the burglary was to obtain files Fielding had refused to turn over to the FBI.

The government attempted to show, mainly through the testimony of Young, Krogh and E. Howard Hunt Jr., that in approving a "covert operation" Ehrlichman knew he was authorizing the break-in. The burglary, Sept. 3-4, 1971, was carried out by Barker and Martinez, under the direction of Liddy.

Sickal resigns as judge

City Court Judge Jim Sickal has resigned his office, Acting City Manager Bill Whitlock said Friday.

Sickal's resignation became effective Thursday. City officials received his letter of resignation late Wednesday.

Whitlock today appointed City Clerk John Vaughn as acting City Judge until a permanent judge could be appointed. Whitlock promised an appointment within the next few days.

Sickal said he resigned for "personal reasons."

"I have over the years, enjoyed the experiences of working with the city attorney and the police department and these experiences have been very rewarding to me," Sickal said.

Sickal, 36 years old, was appointed judge in 1967.

4 hurt in Bootheel accidents

Four persons were injured in two traffic accidents in the Bootheel area Friday, according to the highway patrol.

The first accident occurred at 3:40 p.m. on a county road four miles southwest of Fisk. An eastbound car driven by Bernice West, 33, of Fisk was struck in the left side by a westbound car driven by Jim Parker, 33, of Union, Ohio, after it came over a crest of a small hill. Parker received minor injuries but was not taken to a hospital.

Three people were injured in a two-car collision at 5:20 p.m. on highway 53, one mile north of Campbell.

The patrol said a southbound car driven by Rebecca Jean Hickson, 22, of Campbell, Route One, had slowed to make a left turn

Meat prices--Part 4:

Hoarding will cut supply and drive prices back up

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Consumers plotting their shopping strategy will find lower meat prices for the next few weeks, but the bargains aren't likely to last unless the government can find a way of stopping inflation.

Anyone tempted to stock up now should remember that hoarding will eventually cut supply and simply drive the price right back up again.

Cattlemen recently withheld their beef from market because they weren't getting high enough prices for their livestock. They convinced the federal government to help with a $100-million purchase of beef and pork designed to give livestock producers a short-term shot in the arm and to convince consumers that meat was a good buy right now.

Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz keeps saying that meat is a good buy. He says Americans can't expect 55-cent-a-pound hamburger any more.

With a prod from the government, the National Association of Food Chains recently urged its members — retail stores — to feature beef and other meats. Advertisements indicate the price is coming down.

Administration officials hope that lower prices will encourage consumers to buy. That would bring to market the oversupply of meat that is on ranches and feedlots.

Once that meat has been sold, however, prices probably will rise again. The solution is to make it cheaper to produce the cow. That would mean the farmer could charge the packer less; the packer could charge the supermarket less; and the supermarket could charge you less — providing that inflation doesn't boost the cost of things like labor, rent and electricity.

In May, inflation was proceding at an annual rate of 13.2 per cent. At the same time, the government marketbasket — the amount it costs a hypothetical family of 3.2 persons for farm-produced food — was 19 per cent higher than a year ago. Food prices were up 1.1 per cent in May, although there was a slight decline for meat.

Even the government doesn't know for sure what will happen next. Administration experts and private economists agree, however, that it's going to take some time before the up and down pattern of meat prices evens out.

The Agriculture Department purchase of meat for school lunches won't have much real effect on the market. Officials say it represents the amount of meat produced in only two or three days. But they hope it will have a psychological effect on the consumer.

What does all this mean? Should you go out and fill the freezer full of beef?

The best advice seems to be: Buy what you need. But don't stock up with the idea of hoarding a year's supply.

That's what happened last year during the freeze on beef prices. Americans, hearing warnings of withholding by cattlemen, bought heavily and the buying created a shortage.

The same thing could happen again.

Lower meat prices over the long run — and that means up to two years — depend on lower feed pices. And lower feed prices depend on more grain.

The Agriculture Department said last Monday that there will be record corn and wheat harvests this year, but they said the crops won't be as big as had been predicted.

There were record corn and grain harvests last year, too. Why, then, is the price of feed grains soaring?

Exports are one reason.

In the wake of the Russian wheat deal in the summer of 1972, the price of grain doubled in a year. Farmers who had sold their wheat for about $1.50 a bushel before the Russian deal was announced were angry. They felt they had been cheated.

Last year and this year, they are holding on to the grain until they are sure they can get the highest possible price. Grain dealers in Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas say that farmers have sold only 10 to 20 per cent of the harvest so far this year, compared to 50 or 60 per cent in a normal year.

On June 18, the wheat was selling for $3.99 a bushel and it has been going up fairly steadily since then.

American cattlemen aren't the only ones competing for the wheat and corn. Steadily rising demand around the world has meant a better market for U.S. farm exports and higher prices at home.

The Nixon administration wants to continue exporting farm products. The government sees exports as a way to freer world trade and reduced tariffs. It also sees the exports as a way to create a favorable balance of trade — getting more money for U.S. products than Americans spend for foreign goods.

North American eating habits account for the consumption of about a ton of grain a year per capita. One hundred fifty pounds of that is eaten as grain products; the rest is fed to cattle and indirectly consumed in meat. In the poorer countries, each person consumes about 400 pounds of grain a year — most of it directly.

As the poorer countries get richer, however, their people want better food — more meat, less rice. The demand increases again.

Experts who study world-wide trends in food and population say Americans are simply going to have to change their way of living and get used to eating less beef if the world is to have enough food.

DAEOC accused of not following federal policies

NEW MADRID — Charges of failure to follow federal policies and guidelines in the administration of the Delta Area Head Start program have been leveled against the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation (DAEOC) board of directors.

The charges stem from the attempted dismissal in December 1973 of John Porter of Kennett, social service director for the Delta Head Start program.

Three New Madrid residents, Mrs. Helen Tollison, Mrs. Rita Janowitz and Mrs. Carol Bixler, met recently with Missouri Lt. Gov. William C. Phelps in Cape Girardeau to see if he could give assistance in getting some problems resolved within the Head Start program.

Mrs. Tollison said Phelps told them that since the matter involved a federally funded program and he represents only the state, he could not himself be actively involved, but would get the information to those who could.

According to Mrs. Tollison, Porter, who has worked in the Head Start program since it was established over seven years ago, was notified early in December, 1973 that his employment would be terminated on Dec. 31. The notice was given in a letter from A. R. Meyer, dean of instruction at Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau. At that time the university was the designated agency responsible for the administration of the Head Start program. However, later in the month, administrative responsibilities were assumed by DAEOC in Portageville.

The action to dismiss Porter, Mrs. Tollison said, was taken by the DAEOC board without first advising, consulting or receiving approval from the Area Policy Council. Mrs. Tollison explained that according to federal guidelines, the APC must approve or disapprove the hiring and firing of Head Start staff personnel.

The 33- member APC board is composed of two community representatives from each of the six counties. One of the members is appointed by the county court and the other is designated by the welfare department. The other 21 members represent each of the Head Start centers.

The APC board is the governing body of the Head Start program and meets monthly at the area level to transact business in line with the wishes of participating Head Start parents in each of the centers.

Mrs. Tollison said at its March meeting the Head Start APC had placed all members of the central office staff on permanent employment, which included Porter.

On March 26, the DAEOC board voted to place all central office staff on permanent employment except the fiscal officer, social service director, a bookkeeper and the executive secretary pending consultation with the APC.

"The APC has never voted to dismiss Porter, but to the contrary, has found that he has performed his duties well and there have been no reasons to cause his dismissal," Mrs. Tollison said.

She stated the DAEOC board has ignored the APC and in April, without consulting APC, a newspaper ad was published for a week which announced that the Head Start social service director's job was available.

"The position is not vacant, yet the DAEOC board is continuing to review applicants , which is a direct violation of the federal guidelines and policies," Mrs. Tollison said.

Mrs. Tollison described Porter as the "backbone" of the Head Start program and said he stood pat on following the federal policies and guidelines. "He informed the parents of what their powers were and told them what input they were supposed to have in the program," she said.

"I can't believe that the DAEOC board is too interested in the Head Start program's directions. The board has failed to have a quorum present at two recent meetings and has been unable to transact any business. It's prime purpose seems to be to fire John Porter," she said.

Mrs. Tollison further commented that money was included in the Head Start budget for paying unemployment insurance to Head Start employes, but the employes who are not working during the summer are not receiving it. She said no explanation has been given by DAEOC why the unemployment insurance isn't being received by the employes.

The DAEOC board membership includes four persons from each of the following counties:

Scott — Frank Ferrell, Lynn Ingram, Donald Biggs and Elmer Russell.

New Madrid — Doyle Hicks, Ray Melton, Eugene Cross and Tom Jennings.

Pemiscot — Romney Brockett, D. J. Meredith, Floyd Drew and Mrs. Jimmie Jackson Pointer.

Mississippi — Hunt Welborn, John Clevidence, Charles Williams and Mrs. Berniece Bruce.

Stoddard — Dale Shumaker, Bill Rhodes, Andrew Cain and Paul Schuerenberg.

Most Americans have been appalled with the criminal violence which has been much in the news lately. Kidnapings and holding for ransom have become quite popular. This form of crime was not so attractive when the death sentence was the penalty for kidnaping.

To judge the effect of penalties on crime reduction, airplane skyjacking offers a good example. Between 1968 and 1972 there were 147 attempted skyjackings in the U.S., and 91 were successful. Then came tougher rules and penalties and skyjacking virtually ended. The last successful skyjacking of a U. S. domestic airliner occurred on November 10, 1972.This does not mean no one tried. During 1973, some 3,500 passengers were prevented from boarding their aircraft at U. S. terminals. Over 3,000 were arrested and, according to U. S. News & World Report, some "...60,000 weapons or potential weapons were seized, including 2,162 guns and 23,280 knives."

The lesson is plain. If society wants to stop violent people from committing atrocities, law enforcement has to be beefed up, and the fear of apprehension and punishment has to be felt by those who would commit crime. That is the only way to stop them.

To enable citizens and their children to recognize this odor, many gas utilities are distributing sample cards impregnated with the scent."

LAND USE BILL IS DEAD

A proposed environmental law, known as the "land use" bill, apparently died in the House of Representatives at Washington, when it refused by a vote of 211 to 204 to take it up for discussion.

It would have provided $800 million to help the states and local governments devise means for planning the wisest use of their land and other resources.

It inspired considerable fear and strong opposition in this and other rural areas, where many residents suspected it might be the entering wedge for the government to tell any of us how we could use our private property.

We don't know. We never had a copy of the bill and had no chance to study it, therefore we never expressed an opinion.

It was originated by environmentalists who wanted to stop the widespread rape of our forests, our waters and our land through uncontrolled cutting of timber pollution of our lakes and streams by the big industrial plants, devastation of our farming areas by strip mining.

If we can get a bill that will control those, and at the same time protect the private landowner against crippling government regulation, we believe it is a necessary law.

TAX CHANGES? YES, BUT ...

How does the public consider it is treated by the government at taxpaying time — fairly or unfairly?

If they had their druthers, would Americans rather see changes in the federal income tax laws aimed at assuring that each person pays his fair share, or would they prefer a simplication of the calculations involved in filling out Form 1040?

These and other questions were asked recently of a representative sample of 2,073 persons age 18 and above in a nationwide survey conducted by Opinion Research Corp. of Princeton. The survey was commissioned by H&R Block, Inc., one of the nation's largest firms specializing in preparing income tax returns.

On the first question, the survey found that the majority felt that present federal income tax laws were fair to them personally, but about the same number believed the laws were unfair to the "average" taxpayer.

Middle- income people were most often named as paying "more than their fair share," followed by people with low incomes. Last named were people in the upper-income brackets. In a direct comparison with the upper-income taxpayer, the middle-income taxpayer was seen to be unfairly treated by an overwhelmingly majority — 87 per cent — of the public.

On the question of the need for an over-all reform, more than 75 per cent of the people surveyed believed that at least minor revisions were needed, while more than 50 per cent supported major revisions.

Nearly 75 per cent of the respondents agreed that present tax forms were "too complicated for the average person to understand. Nearly half the public sought professional assistance in filing their 1972 returns.

However, reforms aimed at ensuring fairness rather than simplication were favored by a margin of better than six to one — 79 per cent to 12 per cent. Yet the only provisions presently in the law that were opposed by as many as a fourth of the respondents were the depletion allowance (31 per cent) and the special tax treatment of investors in commercial real estate (25 per cent).

The survey also indicated that nearly half the public believes that simplification of the tax process — for example, using a flat tax rate on total income regardless of the source and with no exclusions or deductions — would result in unfair treatment because of differing personal circumstances could no longer be considered.

A majority opposed elimination of itemized deductions or joint returns. Among those deductions of which the average taxpayer currently can take advantage, only contributions to political candidates were singled out by a sizeable number (47 per cent) as a deduction which might be eliminated.

Not surprisingly, public reaction was favorable to changes in the tax laws which might reduce the amount of tax paid. An overwhelming majority (84 per cent) supported an increase in the present $750 allowance for dependents, and nearly as many (84 per cent) favored a deduction for at least some of the cost of a child's education.

Obviously, public opinion about the federal income tax is "mixed." But while all of us have our particular gripes about the system and ideas about specific reforms that should be made, there is no evidence of any grass- roots movement advocating really drastic changes.

LIFESAVING REALISM

Top government officials, as well as lawmakers, are beginning to face the fact that realism is no less important than environmentalism. This became evident as government leaders testified before a congressional committee on energy crisis "before the end of the decade." Interior Secretary Morton said the public must be made aware of the energy "crisis and the urgent need to take action now." Dr. Edward E. David, Jr., science adviser to the President, said that "arbitrary curtailment" of energy is both unnecessary and undesirable. Many other energy experts testified in a similar vein.

Among them were spokesmen for the investor-owned electric industry. One of the latter, Mr. W. donham Crawford, president of the Edison Electric Institute, emphasized that "... any new government policy should be so framed that the need for energy is given equal consideration with the nation's justifiable concern for the environment." He stressed what other utility industry people have said: "an abundance of electric energy" is required to solve many domestic problems, including supplying food for future generations; rebuilding cities and providing mass transportation and assuring fresh water supplies.

Stop- everything environmentalism has become a miasmic swamp from which the nation must extricate itself or face catastrophe. The kind of realism that pervaded in the congressional hearings offers hope of an awakening to the dangers.

THE TRUTH ABOUT CHILE

In Chile last September the forces of Marxism and their left- side allies suffered one of their most crushing defeats in many years with the overthrow and death by suicide of Chile's Marxist President Allende. Since then, the losing leftists have stopped at nothing to paint the present condition of Chile in the worse possible colors.

A very different picture is given by a reporter for the U.S. national Catholic weekly The Wanderer, William H. Marshner, who spent some time in Chile this spring. Marshner, who speaks excellent Spanish, explored the city of Santiago extensively on his own. He also visited smaller rural towns and villages, looking for evidence of oppression or a "climate of fear" or any of the other conditions so widely reported in the world press.

He found nothing of the kind, seeing fewer policemen and soldiers on the streets than is customary n this country, finding complete freedom oi speech and of the press -- but no support whatever for Allende. Not only did the Chilean army's move against him have overwhelming popular backing, Marshner learned, but the main question people asked was why the army had waited so long.

Marshner concluded that there has been blatant misrepresentation of the truth about Chile in most of our nation's press. Almost no one in Chile wants to go back to a Marxist regime. The majority are now fully satisfied with the government that saved them from a vicious and destructive tyranny. HLH

LOST LUGGAGE

PARIS — One of the biggest problems of air travel is getting your luggage back at the end of the trip. For some reason more luggage is being lost now than ever before, and it's quite a headache for the airlines -- not to mention the people who are flying.

What makes the whole thing mysterious is that if you're traveling with your wife the airlines somehow manage to only lose (ital) her (unital) bags, the ones she absolutely needs if she is going to survive the trip.

There isn't a husband who has ever flown by air who hasn't faced this situation.

You get off the plane dog tired and wait at the baggage gate. The carousel keeps turning and turning with everyone's luggage. You have all your bags in a matter of minutes. Your wife gets all her bags except for one -- the large garment bag with all her dresses, costume jewelry and underthings. You wait an hour staring at the carousel hoping against hope it will be the last piece of baggage off the plane. You don't dare speak to your wife. She finally speaks to you, "They lost my bag."

"I guess they did."

"What are you going to do about it?" she says, her lips pursed as if she's going to let out a scream.

"I am going to do (ital) something (unital) about it," you say, knowing in your heart there isn't a damn thing you can do. But you have to show some machismo. You go up to a man in uniform. "See here, sir," you say in your sternest voice. "You people have lost my wife's bag."

The man looks surprised. "I'm sorry, I'm the pilot of the plane."

There is another official-looking man with a badge on his chest. "Sir," you say, "you people have committed one of the gravest crimes known to tourism. You have lost the luggage of an honest woman. Unless you produce my wife's bag in the next 30 minutes I shall have to report you to the president of your company."

"I'm a customs inspector," the man replies. "Go talk to someone from the airline."

Your wife who is over in the corner twisting her handkerchief asks, "What did they say?"

"I'm narrowing it down," you say. "The pilot of the plane doesn't know where your bag is and neither does the customs service. So it must be someone else."

You are directed to a counter where one lone clerk is trying to cope with a large crowd of angry husbands. It is obviously the lost- luggage counter because all the women are huddled nearby wailing and tearing their clothes.

The clerk, hired for his masochistic tendencies, is smiling as he fills out long sheets of paper taking descriptions of the lost bags.

You get to the counter and ask the stupidenst question any air traveler can pose: "Where is my wife's bag?"

The masochist smiles "New Delhi, Bali, Rio De Janeiro. It could be anywhere."

"I have a good mind to slug you," you say.

"Oh, would you please?" he says, "Most people just shout at me, but very few of them really hit me."

"I wouldn't give you the satisfaction. What are we supposed to do now?"

"Why don't you go to your hotel and get a good night's sleep? If we find your luggage, we'll have it delivered."

"Suppose it's never found?"

"Then you can come back here and I'll fill out another form."

You return to your wife. "Well," you say, "it's no problem. They know exactly where the bag is and you'll have it in the morning."

This calms her down until we get to the hotel. Then you make a mistake. As she's crawling into bed you ask, "Where's your nightie?"

And she lets out a scream that can be heard all over the roofs of Paris.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Beating the Indians

WASHINGTON — No fortress of the early West could compare with the bastion of bureaucracy that now holds the Indians at bay. With paperwork instead of fireworks, the bureaucrats who man the Bureau of Indian Affairs have overpowered the Indians more completely than the cavalry ever did.

Twenty months ago, a few frustrated Indians raided the BIA files and triumphantly bore off hundreds of cartons of the hated papers. The aggrieved Indians showed us the stolen files, which provided documentary proof of the neglect and betrayal that have characterized the white man's conduct toward the Indian.

We wrote a series of columns citing evidence from the documents that the BIA had helped white exploiters cheat the Indians out of their water, timber and mineral rights.

We advised the Indians, nevertheless, to abandon their futile raids and sieges and to fight back instead in the hearing rooms of Congress. We accompanied them to Capitol Hill where we testified in their behalf.

Yet today the BIA is as invulnerable and invincible as ever.

For instance, the BIA administers the tribal lands of the Shoshone- Bannock Indians who own some of the nation's finest potato acreage at Ft. Hall, Idaho. The BIA leases the best of this Indian land to corporate farmers for $15.36 an acre, which brings the Shoshone- Bannocks a return of less than two per cent of the harvest.

Yet neighboring landowners, who lease their land to potato growers, get 30 to 40 per cent of the take. The private landowners have shared with the growers in the great potato prosperity, as prices have soared from $1.80 to $6.80 a bushel since 1970.

Still the bureaucrats at the BIA, unmoved by the Indian appeals for the profit- sharing, continue to collect the same fixed price for the Indians as the corporate farmers paid before the price explosion.

The corporate tenants also leave the land bare during the winter. This erodes the soil, which runs off and pollutes the trout streams. Under the law, an environmental impact study should be made. But the local BIA officials have refused.

"We've made our own informal assessment," said Hiram Olney, the local BIA superintendent, "and determinedd that a full- blown environmental study is not needed." This is another decision which benefits the corporate tenants instead of the Indian landowners.

The bureaucrats claim that the sprinkler systems on Indian land and a tribal ban against the use of certain chemicals make the land more costly for the white tenants to farm. It is true that the tribe banned chemicals, which seeped into the streams and killed the fish. The aerial spraying also made the Indians ill.

But Jack G. Peterson, an agricultural economist who has spent two years in Ft. Hall, contends that the Indian restrictions don't increase costs at all. Nor have the bureaucrats produced any statistics to support their claim that the chemical ban has reduced crop yields.

In any event, any profit-sharing arrangements, presumably, would permit the corporate growers to deduct legitimate costs.

The BIA claims the Indians prefer the $15.36 set rate, rather than gamble on a percentage of the profits, because "they're afraid of the high risk." Yet under profit sharing, even a poor crop would earn the Indians more than the dirt- cheap, fixed- rate leases.

Peterson tells us he has heard BIA officials warn tribal members against profit sharing. "If your tenant doesn't grow any potatoes, you don't get any money," he has heard them threaten.

This is all too typical of BIA tactics, which seem calculated to con the Indian out of their legitimate earnings. It follows the BIA tradition of favoring white profiteers over the victimized Indians.

But the confused Shoshone-Bannocks finally got wise to their BIA administrators and sent a resolutuion to Washington protesting "the inequitable manner in which tribal ... lands have been leased by federal government." The tribal leaders demanded "an immediate investigation" by the secretary of the interior. But their complaints so far have been ignored.

The General Accounting Office, meanwhile, has conducted an investigation of the Shoshone- Bannock ripoff for Congress. But the unreleased report was screened by BIA officials before it reached Capitol Hill. Although it largely whitewahses the BIA, it confirms that the $15.36- an-acre the Indians are paid is only a fraction of what their white neighbors are earning from the potato boom.

Footnote: In fairness to Interior Secretary Rogers Morton, he has recently sided with the Mohave and Cheyenne Indians in controversies over Indian rights. His rulings have been imposed upon the BIA, which is under his jurisdiction.

WASHINGTON WHIRL: Rep. James Symington, D-Mo., kicked Sen. Quentin Burdick, D-N.D., in the stomach the other day, knocking the wind out of him. But it was all in good sport. The two legislators were sparring in karate class ... Ex- White House investigator Jack Caulfield conceded to senators behind closed doors that he asked Assistant Attorney General Henry Petersen to try to link ex-Interior Secretary Steward Udall and ex-McGovern fund-raiser Henry Kimelman to the Mafia. Petersen "indicated he would watch it," Caulfield secretly testified. But he didn't think anything ever came of it, he said ... The Republican National Committee paid $1,625 to rent 50,000 names from the mailing list of the untraconservative Liberty Lobby during a recent fund-raising drive. We have reported in the past that the Liberty Lobby has been infiltrated by Nazis who revere the memory of Adolf Hitler.

Inside Labor

by Victor Kiesel

Fear of Crackdown: Government Orders over 100 Unions to Open For Tens of Thousands of Blacks -- or Else ...

WASHINGTON — On the black labor- hiring front this is the year of the quota and crackdown. Unprecedently, federal authorities have just warned leaders of over 100 construction locals and some joint councils to open their unions, admit as many as 25 to 30 per cent new black, Puerto Rican and other minority members and then get them on the job.

This edict came from the Office of Federal Contract Compliance (OFCC) -- which monitors the ethnic and racial employment spread of contractors doing scores of billions of dollars worth of business annually with the U.S. government. If the unions which have just been admonished -- and the glaziers, carpenters, bricklayers, and electrical workers appear to be the most numerous -- ignore the OFCC directive it can initiate a "pattern and practice" suit against the union.

The unions and their leaders could then be brought into the federal courts to show cause why they shouldn't be punished for violating Executive Order 11246 (non-discrimination). The federal judiciary could then order the unions to comply -- and if defied, could lay heavy fines on the leaders personally and on the union treasuries as well.

Contractors dealing with these unions also have been warned. They can be more heavily hit. Their contracts with the federal government can be ripped up. They can be fined. They can be "debarred," that is, prevented from future bidding on U.S. projects or dealing with any federal department or agency. And this goes right through to any corporate subsidiary.

Much of this action is in construction work. But not all. For the first time, for example, the OFCC, headed by Philip Davis, has asked the Treasury Department to move against a bank for allegedly violating the executive order. Thus Treasury has asked the bank, in Pittsburgh, to show cause why it should not be punished for not hiring enough minority employes. Actual punishment could be mighty costly -- its status as a lending institution is in jeopardy.

Further, the OFCC also has the Department of Defense moving on similar lines against four medium- sized contractors whose names are being whithheld for a while.

"This is the year of the crackdown," said a high government source. "We're operative. We mean business. We're knocking on doors."

If there is a full follow-through, this could revolutionize the American labor movement. Just look at the warning the OFCC gave to the hundred locals and three Carpenters Joint Councils. Upping the black, Spanish-surnamed, Oriental, American Indian and female membership of these construction unions to 25 or 30 per cent of the membership means adding tens of thousands of new dues-payers. It means getting them on the job --giving them "man-hours" (is there a women's hour, now?) on the construction site. It means bumping workers with more years in the field, since tight seniority lists are comparatively rare in the construction trades.

It means tough resistance by the rank and file and their local leaders. It means court tests right up to the high bench. It means that this is the moment of truth on the issue: can the U.S. government impose such quotas?

The government, in chastising the locals and joint councils, said they had not shown good faith in attempting to meet minority work goals in 21 city, county and state areas. They had not done much with their voluntary hometown plans for absorbing the minorities -- most of whom are black. So the accused unions have moved from under the voluntary action Part One of federal construction bed regulations to the imposed requirements of Part Two.

Now the unions have rigid "mandatory minority hiring goals." These are quotas. And although they range between 25 and 30 per cent minority union membership -- they can run higher.

As the OFCC sees it, oddly enough, the worst violators are locals in Northern Cities such as Boston and Cleveland -- which have dense black populations. Kansas City, one of the nation's biggest construction areas, runs next.

All this showed up in an "audit" of 46 voluntary hometown plans running from 1973 into this year. Says one governemnt official: "They just didn't show good faith. Now they'll have to, or we'll just take them into court."

Actually it's the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission which now has the authority to take court action though each federal department such as Treasury and the Defense Department can demand to know why one of its contractors or fund recipients (Federal Insurance in the case of the bank) isn't obeying the executive order.

On the construction front, quotas certainly will be fought by the labor leaders. In New York City, which was not one of those chided, the "goal" is a 26 per cent level of minority construction workers, mostly blacks and Puerto Ricans. Well, the construction unions there are politically powerful. They're not about to yield. They report openings for 1,000 minority jobs, instead of taking on one black or Puerto Rican apprentice for every three whites hired. And the apprenticeships are the key to working up the union pipeline into the $10- an- hour jobs.

So it does look like the year of the crackdown.

The bride and groom presided over the champagne dinner during which the wedding party and guests were served at a large formal table, decorated with yellow and white floral pieces. The three-tiered white wedding cake was topped by a bouquet of pink rosebuds.

Ann Landers

Florida man loves his 'watch pig'

Dear Ann Landers: I'm sure a lot of people thought you'd been hornswoggled when you printed that letter from the man who wanted to know if it was true that pigs were smarter than dogs. He needed an animal to guard the house and was considering a "watch pig."

I just read something in a journal that convinced me the letter was on the level.

A man named Anderson in Grass Key, Florida, has a pet pig named Packer. Packer is housebroken. When he wants to go outside he stands by the kitchen door and oinks.

Anderson says Pack is much smarter than any cat or dog he has ever owned. Also he is the hungriest. Pack eats 15 pounds of cracked corn and barley every day, which adds five pounds to his weight. The pig now weighs 350 pounds. Eventually he'll weigh 800. "Just more of him to love," smiled Mr. Anderson.

I hope you'll print this. It will surprise many people. -- Daily Ann Fan

Dear Daily: Well, here's your letter. And you can count me among those who were "surprised." I wonder if Mr. Anderson will feel the same about Pack when he weighs 800 pounds.

I notice nothing was said about a Mrs. Anderson. I'll bet 15 pounds of cracked corn he's a bachelor.

Dear Ann Landers: Can you tell me how to get a guy who is really an A- Number- One- All- Around- Handy- Man off his lazy rear end? He makes a good living and I don't have to work, but I can't get the big lug to finish a project. Here's the state of affairs:

1. He took a lovely antique rocking chair apart because it was a little off kilter. I begged him to leave it alone, but no, he insisted on "fixing" it. The rocker is 114 years old, a real beauty. I'd love to use it but it's dismantled in the corner of the storage room.

2. He bought equipment and material for a tile patio five months ago. It's still in the garage.

3. Three unfinished bookcases he promised to paint and put in his study are in the storage room with the rocking chair.

4. He bought two huge bags of lawn seed. They are in the garage with the lumber for the patio cover.

There's plenty more but I don't want to bore you. What can I do with a man like this? Whenever I speak to him about his unfinished projects he calls me a nag and says, "please get off my back." I await your words of wisdom in our local paper. -- Big Mama

Dear Mama: Sorry, there is no sure way to get an immature man who is drowning in a sea of unfinished projects "off his lazy rear end." If it's any comfort to you, I hear from dozens of women who are struggling with the same problem. I'll tell you what I tell them: Stop nagging. Give him a deadline and tell him if he doesn't meet it you'll hire the work done. Then go ahead and do it.

When he sees the bills, THAT might get him off his lazy rear end.

The bride is the daughter of Carl Sapp of New Haven, Ind., and Betty Sapp of Parma. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Coffer of Catron Route One.

A reception was held in the church dining room following the ceremony. The bride's table was covered in pale blue overlaid with acru lace and was draped with blue, white and pink swags.

Table accents included a honeybomb bride in blue and white, a three- tiered, columned, wedding cake topped by a miniature bride and groom beneath a four-post arch accented by lilies of the valley. Above the table was a large white wedding bell accented by blue and white.

Pink punch was served from a cut- glass bowl, along with nuts and mints from small cut- glass dishes and wedding cake. Mrs. Deema Pettigrew, Mrs. Nevel Ornder and Mrs. Don Landers of Risco served for the reception.

Following a brief wedding trip, the couple is at home on Catron Route One, where the groom is employed in construction work with his father.

The groom is a 1974 graduate of Risco High School, and the bride will be a junior at Parma High School this fall.

Cardinals take Cincinnati 3-2

CINCINNATI (AP) — Jim Dwyer's tie-breaking two-run pinch single in the eighth inning sparked the St. Louis Cardinals to a 3-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Friday night.

Joe Torre opened the inning with an infield hit when third baseman Dan Driessen fell down trying to field his grounder. Ted Simmons doubled Torre to third, and Clay Carroll relieved Cincinnati starter Fred Norman, 8-7.

Carroll issued an intentional walk to Bake McBride, loading the bases, and Ken Reitz forced Torre at the plate before Dwyer, recently recalled from the minors, delivered a single to center. He was batting for relief pitcher Rich Folkers.

The Reds got their first run against Alan Foster in the first inning when Johnny Bench's bases-loaded, checked-swing grounder scored Pete Rose, who had singled and moved around to third on consecutive walks.

The Cards tied the game 1-1 in the seventh on Lou Brock's run-scoring single after Reitz opened the inning with a ground-rule double and went to third on Tim McCarver's pinch single.

Foster left for a pinch hitter in the sixth and Folkers picked up the win by pitching a scoreless seventh inning. Al Hrabosky and Mke Garman finished up.

Chris Evert wins

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Chris Evert, an icy tennis killer in pink ruffles and bows, became the new Wimbledon queen Friday while a remarkable 39-year-old relic named Ken Rosewall took a big step toward the men's crown.

Just a sprite of a man at 5 foot 7 and 142 pounds whose tennis glories were behind him, the Australian stood two sets down and 3-5 in the third—and even faced one match point— before rallying for a magnificent 6-8, 4-6, 9-8, 6-1, 6-3 victory over giant Stan Smith in a men's semifinal.

The dramatic center-court triumph—achieved before an ecstatic, wildly cheering gallery of 14,000—sent the Sydney stroke-master into Saturday's final round against America's 21-year-old Jimmy Connors.

Connors, upon learning of his opponent after methodically cutting down U.S. teammate Dick Stockton, 4-6, 6-2, 6-3, 6-4, raised his eyebrows in surprise and commented: "How do you play a legend?"

Rosewall has been a runnerup three times but never a winner here in 23 years of Wimbledons.

The petite Miss Evert, at 19 the second-youngest lady to win this title in modern times, literally crushed Olga Morozova, her doubles partner and newfound friend from Moscow, 6-0, 6-4.

NFL players try swinging Dolphins to join strike

By The Associated Press

Striking National Football League players, hoping to swing the balking Miami Dolphins to their side Friday night, won a victory in San Diego earlier in the day when linebacker Dan Goode, a Chargers' firstround draft choice, joined the picket line.

Striking National Football League players, hoping to swing the balking Miami Dolphins to their side Friday night, won a victory in San Diego earlier in the day when linebacker Don Goode, a Chargers' firstround draft choice, joined the picket line.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFL Players Association, flew to Miami to talk with the Super Bowl champions, a few of whom have said they would cross the union's picket line so they could play against the College All-Stars in Chicago on July 26.

A failure by some key Dolphins to honor the union's picket line could have a weakening effect on the striking players, who threaten to wipe out the NFL's exhibition season if their demands for freedom from binding contracts are not met.

And in another development, the players' union prepared to set up its second picket line on Saturday in Huntsville, Tex., where the Houston Oilers become the second of the 26 NFL teams to open training camp for rookies and free agents. Team officials said they expected 104 of the players in camp Saturday.

Elliott Bowers, President of San Houston State, site of the Oilers camp, said an NFLPA representative in Washington assure him there would be no problems for the school.

"I've been assured by both sides that this will be a peaceful thing," said Dr. Bowers. "This is something between the owners and veterans and unless we're called on to protect our own people and our property, we'll stay out of it."

Unlike the Chargers' training site at U.S. International University, where the campus is fenced off and one main gate was designated as the picket area, Sam Houston State's campus is wide open, with city streets running throughout the campus.

"We can't rope off public streets so we don't know yet what guidelines will be set up until the Management Council people get here," an Oiler official said.

In San Diego, Goode became the second Charger — joining free agent wide receiver Coleman Zeno — to walk out of camp and join the picketing veterans.

They went on strike on Monday over a number of freedom issues, including the right to negotiate with any team they wish and the right to veto trades.

Litton says farmer, consumer struggle must be stopped

ST. LOUIS ---"Pitting farmers and consumers against each other for political reasons must be stopped," Jerry Litton of Chillicothe, U.S. Representative from Missouri's Sixth District, warned as he addressed the Sixth District Production Credit Association Director's Conference June 24 -25 in St. Louis.

Rep. Litton said the current economic disaster, which is bankrupting thousands of farmers and feeders today, was caused by last year's food price freeze. Litton, a freshman member of Congress, has been trying to bring rural and urban America closer together. "It is imperative that agriculture show urban America what it is that encourages or discourages a farmer from producing more or less food, and how this establishes the price of food," Litton said.

Dr. Donald B. Roark, deputy governor of the Farm Credit Administration echoed Litton's comments by saying,"There are other people in highly visible positions of world leadership who are concerned about the price of food only as it affects the balance of payments."

Dr. Roark went on to stress the critical position the world food situation is in. "Seventy -five million people are born each year around the world. Of this number, 45 million are born in countries unable to feed their growing population," Roark said.

William R. Crotty of New York City, vice president of Citicorp, spoke about the world wide money demand and supply situation. He stated that when the supply of money outruns the supply of goods, there is inflation, and when the demand for credit exceeds the supply, interest rates rise. The supply of money in nations around the world is tight, Crotty said, and he expects interest rates to continue as they are now for some time until new anti -inflation programs have a chance to take effect.

Dr. Kenneth Naden of Washington D.C., chief executive officer of the national council of Farmer Cooperatives, who also addressed the convention, said "The American people have a love -hate relationship with inflation. We hate inflation, but love everything that causes it. Inasmuch as the public wants strong statements opposing inflation, and wants actions which induce inflation, we shall, no doubt, continue to have both."

Speaking of the current situations, Dr. Naden stated, "No one gives you (farmers) a fair price just because you deserve it. You have to have sufficient economic, bargaining and marketing power to get the prices you deserve."

The Sikeston Production Credit Association serves Scott, New Madrid, Mississippi, Stoddard, Cape Girardeau, Butler and Bollinger counties. In 1973 it loaned over $52 million to about 2,000 farmers.

Robert Wright, of Sikeston president of the association, stated in the association's annual report, "The association belongs to the membership it serves" and feels and that "PCA has been a vital factor in the success of Southeast Missouri agriculture in the past and will contribute even more in meeting the challenges of the future."

Silver Award winners

PCA directors attend conference

Five Production Credit Association directors and their wives from the Sikeston PCA joined Robert A. Wright, president of the Sikeston Association, and his wife Laverne in attending the Sixth District PCA Director's Conference June 24 -25 in St. Louis.

Directors and wives attending the Sikeston Production Credit Association were Charles and Peggy Causey of Bloomfield, Gene and Marilyn Dement of Sikeston, Louis and Thelma Kalkbrenner of Poplar Bluff, Jimmy and Alberta Bishop of East Prairie and Ray and Carolyn Fowler of New Madrid.

The conference was attended by about 800 directors, officers and guests.

One highlight of the conference was the presentations of a series of awards by T.R. McGuire, president of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of St. Louis. Silver Awards were given to PCA assistant vice presidents for outstanding performance during 1973.

Four of the district's 10 Silver Awards recipients are from the Sikeston PCA. They include Bill Settles of Dexter, Fred Alexander of Portageville, Gordon Hill of Sikeston and Ray Edmonds of Charleston.

"We are serving America's most dynamic and fastest growing industry -agriculture! More exciting things are happening today in agriculture then every before," McGuire said in his closing remarks to the directors, officers and guests attending the conference.

McGuire added that "by the end of June, the District's 44 Production Credit Associations will have more than $800 million outstanding in loans to nearly 40,000 farmers in the three states of Arkansas, Illinois and Missouri."

McGuire went on to list a series of significant achievements by the PCAs last year. They included: the greatest amount of credit ever extended in a single year -- more than $1.2 billion, the best earning record in PCA's history, the biggest volume increase in 15 years and the greatest total market penetration ever.

"Borrowed capital is, as of today, the farmer's very best input bargain, "McGuire said.

Also addressing the conference was Sixth District Rep. Jerry Litton of Chillicothe. See related story for the content of his remarks.

Lay-by herbicides advantage this year

By JOE H. SCOTT
Agronomy Specialist

PORTAGEVILLE - Crop conditions change rapidly in the Bootheel. About two weeks ago fields were too wet to work. Last week growers were irrigating cotton, soybeans and corn.

The hot weather seems to have helped the cotton crop as it is growing and has a better color. Also fields are much cleaner than two weeks ago.

Late-planted soybeans, which were planted last week, needed moisture for a good stand and older beans were showing moisture stress on some soils. Soybean cyst nematode symptons are showing up in fields that have a moisture stress.

Cotton is squaring and a few blooms have been reported. But I am afraid we are going to need a long growing season for some of the late planted cotton and cotton that has been damaged by sand and 2, 4-D.

Many cotton field have skippy stands. This will be a year when lay-by herbicides can be used to an advantage. Grass and weeds can be a problem at harvest and can result in lower grades. Diuron and Linuron can be used for late season weed control. Add a surfactant to lay-by sprays if have emerged weeds. Be sure to follow label recommendations. Fall seeded crops in cotton fields should be taken into consideration when apply herbicides late in the season.

Dr. Oscar Calvert and Dr. Charles Baldwin of the plant pathology department have prepared excellent tables giving suggested fungicide treatments for wheat and barley to control diseases on the crop to be planted this fall. You can get a copy at the local extension center.

The Missouri Seed Improvement Association is suggesting to their certified growers to treat wheat seed with a recommended fungicide. If seed is treated and then bagged be sure a tag is sewed on the bag showing that the seed is treated.

Wynard Aslin, executive secretary of the Missouri Seed Improvement Association, says there will be a shortage of registered seed of all wheat varieties this fall. This is due to two factors: A shortage of foundation seed last fall and low yields.

Wynard is asking registered seed growers not to sell any seed out of Missouri for the time being. He would like to make an estimate of number of bushels of registered seed of each variety of wheat available in the state and to get Missouri certified growers to contact registered seed producers so that they will have first chance at getting the registered seed.

Soybean applications for certification are due July 15. Growers who have planted late can send part of their application in now or drop the office in Columbia a note so that they will not be charged a penalty.

Post-emergence weed control tips offered

By THOMAS A. BROWN, Jr.
Area Agronomy Specialist

BLOOMFIELD - Numerous requests for information pertaining to post-emergence weed control in soybeans are coming to the University of Missouri Extension Center in Bloomfield.

Two herbicides including Dinoseb (Dinitro) and 2,4-DB (Butoxone or Butyrac) are recommended for post-emergence weed control treatments in soybeans, and if properly used, should control most weeds in beans throughout the season.

Dinoseb can be used at two different stages of soybean growth. Fair to good control of a variety of weeds including cocklebur, morning glory, pigweed, ragweed, smartweed, spiny sida, velvetleaf, carpetweed, barnyardgrass, crabgrass, giant foxtail, jimsonweed, lambsquarter, and coffeeweed can be expected from this chemical. It will not control fall panicum, johnsongrass, nutgrass, or wild cane.

Dinoseb can be used as an early post- emergence treatment when soybean plans are in the cotyledon stage (first pair of leaves or "seed leaves") but before the first true leaves, the second pair, open to expose the terminal bud. This treatment should be applied only when a flush of weeds comes up shortly after planting, and it can only be expected to control weeds that are up at the time of application. Crop injury may be expected if the temperature exceeds 85 degrees F. If the soybeans do not come up uniformly, varying degrees of injury may be the result.

Dinoseb is also, recommended for use as a post-emergence direct treatment from the time the beans are five inches tall up to first bloom. This treatment will control various annual broadleaved weeds that escape previously- used herbicides. The use of a surfactant mixed with this herbicide will improve its effectiveness. To avoid excessive crop injury, the spray must not be applied higher than one-half the height of soybean plants.

2,4-DB is also recommended for use at two different stages of soybean growth.

What's the law?

The case of the struggling neighbors

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Archie asked his neighbor and bosom buddy, George, to help him move a 500 pound freezer down into his basement. And to facilitate matters, Archie provided a dolly on which the freezer rested while the two struggling men slowly eased the freezer, step by step, into the basement.

The procedure followed by the two men was very simple. To prevent a too rapid descent, George stood above the freezer and pulled back on it while Archie, standing below, pushed upward on it.

Unfortunately, near the bottom of the staircase, a catastrostroke occurred. George asked Archie whether the freezer was resting securely and when Archie answered in the affirmative, George started to position himself on the next lower step. As he did so, however, the freezer started to slip forward to the chagrin of poor hapless Archie. And to prevent him from being mashed like a potato, George pulled back of the freezer with all of his strength.

The result? Archie was saved, George suffered a severe back derangement and another fast friendship bit the dust as George sued Archie for his injured back.

"It was all Archie's fault," insisted George in Court. "He told me the freezer was resting securely when it wan't."

"Some pal," responded Archie. "He saved me so he could sue me. Actually, however, he can't collect a penny. In being neighborly enough to help me move the freezer, he assumed the risk of possible injury."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make Archie pay for his neighbor's injured back?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that Archie had breached a duty of care that he owed to his neighbor, George. He had created an emergency situation, noted the judge, by carelessly permitting the freezer to slip forward when it was his responsibility to hold it in place.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor of
The Daily Standard:

Occasionally events sharpen one's appreciation of a good home in a good community full of good people. This is my "Fanfare To Sikeston" for the outpouring of love and concern which so many persons here and in Southeast Missouri have showered on our family during the recent illness and death of my husband. For so many to say "I Care" in so many ways is both humbling and sustaining. This is my letter of gratitude for immeasurable acts of kindness and sympathy which symbolize a good community of people who care.

Mrs. Keith Collins.

July 2, 1974

Mr. Editor -

Recently my brother returned to Sikeston from Kansas with his wife and daughter. My brother is about to leave for a 12- month tour of Korea. He loves his wife so much that to help her through this year he wrote this little poem for his wife Gail —

"BEST OF ALL"

Her hair was blond, her eyes were blue,
This beautiful woman I thought I knew,
I've made her happy, I've made her sad,
And yes alot of times I've made her mad,
I've done alot to this woman in my life,
But best of all I've made her my wife.

L. Jackman

Thank you sir for letting me share this small poem with all of Sikeston.

Dear Sir:

If Mrs. Barbara Eagleton wants to see her husband reelected to the United States Senate, it would behoove her to do her "homework" concerning the Equal Rights Amendent. The ERA does not guarantee a woman's right to equal pay -- the Equal OPPORTUNITIES Act of 1964 has already done that. It does guarantee that women will register for the draft and serve in the military equally with men. And Mr. Eagleton, on October 18, 1973 joined with other Senators and voted for a Resolution to commit American blood and treasure to the Mideast war.

I will not give the full text of the Senate Resolution 189, but the key words in the Resolution are: (Quote) That it is the sense of the Senate to maintain Israel's deterrent strength be implemented by continuing to transfer to Israel, by whatsoever means necessary, Phantom aircraft and other equipment in the quantities needed by Israel to repel the aggressors. (End Quote

Mrs. Harry Bock

PUBLIC NOTICES

NOTICE OF OPEN PUBLIC HEARING CONCERNING PROPOSED AIRPORT DEVELOPMENT
At Sikeston Memorial Airport
Sikeston, Missouri

On August 5, 1974 at 7:30 P.M. or as soon thereafter as the course of other business will permit there will be convened an open public hearing on the following proposed airport development:

Acquire 39 acres of land at northeast edge of existing airport for clear zone and ultimate runway extension; obtain airspace easements on land under northwest approach to ultimate crosswind runway; construct 70' X 500' extension to north end of existing northeast- southwest runway to result in an ultimate length of 4800'; construct a 40' X 300' parallel taxiway and a 40' X 275' connecting taxiway at the north end of the existing taxiway; install medium intensity lighting.

Place of Meeting. In the Council Chambers of the City Administration Building, 215 North New Madrid Street, Sikeston, Missouri.

Purpose of Hearing. To consider the economic, social, and environmental effects of the airport location and its consistency with the goals and objectives of such urban planning as has been carried out for this area.

Conduct of the Meeting. Representatives of the Sikeston Airport Advisory Board will at the outset present a summary of their views concerning the airports and the proposed project's social economic, and environmental impact, and their consistency with locally carried out urban planning.

Other persons present and desiring to do so will then be afforded the opportunity to present written or oral views (whether in favor of, in opposition to, or by way of proposed revision of, the proposed project).

All oral comments will be recorded.

Availability of Draft Environmental Assessment Report. The City Manager, with the advice of the Sikeston Airport Advisory Commission, has prepared a document summarizing the environmental impact which the airport and proposed project are expected to have. Any person desiring to review this statement may do so during normal working hours at the office of the City Manager, 215 North New Madrid Street, Sikeston, Missouri, and at the office of the Airport Manager, Terminal Building, Sikeston Memorial Airport.

Cifuentes said the boy, whom he would not identify, had been bitten last month by a rabid street dog in Mexico City. He said the boy recovered without medication apparently because he had antibodies in his bloodstream that fought the rabies infection.

Cifuentes said laboratory tests conducted at a state hospital established the boy did have rabies. If independent tests confirm the diagnosis, it would be only the third known case of a recovery from the disease — one of the most fatal known to man.

At present, 14 painful abdominal injections are needed to halt development of rabies in a human being after the person has been infected by a bite from a rabid animal.

Hayti council throws open annex issue

HAYTI - The Hayti City Council Monday night put it up to the people of Hayti to cedice if they want to increase the area of the city through annexation.

City Attorney James "Tick" Vickrey presented a resolution to the council calling for a special election to be held July 23 for the purpose of enabling the qualified voters to vote on the question of whether or not the corporate boundaries of Hayti should be extended.

The area in question is one mile east of the present city limits along Highway 84 to Park Road. The main reason for annexing the area is to allow the city at a later date provide water and sewer to residences and businesses in the area.

Several businesses have already located in the area along the highway.

In the American colonies, few homes or barns were complete until the weather-vane was in place. Artisans fashioned them of wood, and later of wrought iron, sheet metal and copper.

$400,000 2-year contract awarded for manpower plan

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Office of Comprehensive Health Planning has received a $400,000 two-year federal contract for development of a statewide health manpower plan, Gov. Christopher S. Bond said Friday.

The grant, awarded by the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, resulted from recommendations developed at a conference here last April.

"I am confident that through a coordinated statewide effort, Missouri will have a truly effective health manpower delivery system which will meet the health care needs of each citizen of our state," Bond said.

The state Office of Comprehensive Health Planning will study health manpower requirements and develop a plan to meet the needs.

The office will develop a communications link between hospitals, clinics, medical schools and the regional health manpower planning agencies.

The study will identify the health manpower situtaion in eight major occupational categories:

Medicine and osteopathy, dentistry, pharmacy, podiatry, optometry, veterinary medicine, nursing and allied health occupations.

Emerson to locate in Hayti

HAYTI - A new industry, Emerson Electric, is moving to Hayti, Mayor Fred Chaffin confirmed Tuesday. The firm will open a distribution center for motors.

Mayor Chaffin reported,

"I don't know too much about the details, when they will open and things like that, but they will be moving here.

"The distribution center will be located at the Federal Compress in Hayti at the south end of the plant. Two buildings involving roughly 80,000 square feet will be occupied. I understand about 20 people will be employed there," he added.

Two buildings have been leased from the Federal Compress by Emerson Electric for storage of the motors.

Caruthersville awarded waste treatment grant

CARUTHERSVILLE - It has been announced in Washington D.C. that the environmental Protection Agency has awarded $71,250 grant to the city of Caruthersville for the preparation of facility plans for a waste treatment works project.

The total estimated cost of the project is $95,000 and the grant is made under the Waste Treatment Works program of the Environmental Protection Agency.

When contacted about this announcement, Mayor B. F. Rogers said "this is news to me" and that he hadn't received word on the matter yet.

"I'm sure it's true, though, and I would guess the grant is an advance for engineering work and the televising of sewers," the major said.

Rogers added that the project "will be completed". He said "just because we laid off Buescher- Frankenberg as consultants doesn't mean they have stopped on this project. They have a contract with the city concerning the sewer project and they will see it through."

Pemiscot County to hold tax sale

CARUTHERSVILLE - The second three-year tax sale in Pemiscot County will be held Aug. 26 according to Pemiscot County Collector Roger Medlin. On that day, delinquent real estate property will be sold beginning at 10 a.m. on the front steps of the Pemiscot County Court House.

"The sale will involve about 100 pieces of property," Medlin said, "with a total estimated value of $70,000."

A listing of the pieces of property to be sold will be printed in the Hayti newspaper this year, the Missouri Herald, after being run in the two Caruthersville newspapers the past two years. The listings will be run July 26th, Aug. 1st, and Aug. 8th.

Property being sold is that of people who did not pay their taxes in 1971, 1972 and 1973. Last year, the 1969 and 1970 delinquent real estate property was sold, starting this county on the three year tax sale instead of the past four-year sale.

"One thing that has helped in the increase in personal tax collection is the publishing of the delinquent tax list in the local papers," Medlin said. "The people just don't want their names in the paper in that manner."

For those persons who did not pay their current taxes by March 1st of this year, they will face a stiffer penalty than those who did, the collector said.

"A delinquent real estate tax book will be prepared and the delinquent's name will be entered in this book," he said.

What this action means, Medlin said, is that those people who did not pay the amount of the tax by March 1st will not only have to pay the amount of the tax, but also a two per cent penalty, interest (which changes monthly), and a 25 cent charge for having his name on the tax book.

Spainhower is investing $50 million

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — State Treasurer James I. Spainhower said Friday he is investing $50 million of state funds in 311 banks in 84 Missouri counties.

He said his office will try to deposit another $50 million later this year. The banks will pay 8 per cent interest to the state.

The distribution is based on a formula which returns an amount to each county proportional to the amount paid by the county in state sales and income taxes.

When the amount designated for a county has been determined, the applications from the banks within that county be checked against the requirements of the formula and the amount available for deposit with each bank is established.

"Any bank in the state that reflects a community involvement by maintaining a loan-deposit ration of at least 50 per cent will receive its share of the money, providing it chooses to accept the deposit at the maximum rate of interest allowed by law," Spainhower said.

Queen Victoria sent some 500,000 pounds of chocolate as a Christmas present to British troops fighting the Boers in Africa, according to the National Geographic Society.

Diggers search

Site Director Mike Southard of East Prairie looks over a recently exposed area of the Towasohgy State Archaeological Site as student workers dig on other parts of the Indian settlement. Jim Porter, left, of the University of Oregon and Bill Ganzer of Southern Illinois University are two of the crew who are trying to unlock the secrets of the Indian city that once flourished about 10 miles east of East Prairie. One of the site mounds rises behind the men. (Daily Standard photo)

Hard, hot work

Most of the work done by students like Ganzer, left, and Porter consists of hard and hot digging to carefully expose the structure of the Indian town. The depressions near the men are profile cuts of possible wall posts that will be studied in the site lab when digging season ends this summer. The site is open to visitors Monday through Friday until 1:30 p.m. It can be reached by driving east on Highway 80 from East Prairie, then south for about five miles on Mississippi County Routes AA and FF. A Gravel fork leads east for one mile from Route FF, then south one mile to the site. (Daily Standard photo)

Boy recovers from rabies

MEXICO CITY, Mexico (AP) — A Mexican doctor said Friday a 4-year-old patient of his recovered from rabies and the case could point the way to a less painful vaccine or even a cure for the disease.

Dr. Enrique Cifuentes visited the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., Friday with blood and urine specimens he had isolated from the boy.

CDC officials would not comment on the case.

On his return from Atlanta, Dr. Cifuentes said he hoped the case would lead to major strides in antirabies treatment.

Government rests its case against Ehrlichman

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government rested its conspiracy case against John D. Ehrlichman and three former White House "plumbers" Friday, and the judge left open the possibility that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger may still be called as a defense witness.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell also turned down for the second time a set of written questions defense lawyers want to submit to President Nixon for sworn answers, saying they did not meet the court's guidelines.

Gesell said such sworn statements had been asked of presidents only two or three times in American history and he would allow them only if the information can't be obtained another way and if the information is absolutely essential to the trial.

However, Gesell left open the possibility that he might still sign an order sending the interrogatories to the White House if the defense can come up with a list of questions which meet his standards. He did not reveal what the questions are other than to indicate that several involve minor details for which he said answers already were avialable.

Lawyers for Ehrlichman indicated they might try again to come up with acceptable questions. If the questions are sent to the President and he heeds the court order to answer them, the answers could then be read to the jury.

As the prosecution rested its case after calling 16 witnesses in 4½ days, Gesell indicated he may drop one of the four perjury counts leveled against Ehrlichman alone.

And he warned the lawyers for the former Nixon domestic aide against attempting to show that the President gave instructions to withhold information about the Ellsberg break-in case from the grand jury that indicted the four defendants.

"If those orders were given, they were illegal orders and I will so instruct the jury," Gesell said.

The exchange was out of the jury's hearing as Gesell asked Ehrlichman's lawyers their justification for calling Asst. Atty. Gen. Henry E. Petersen as one of the lead-off witnesses.

William S. Frates, who heads Ehrlichman's four-lawyer team, said there had been testimony that Ehrlichman gave instructions to plumbers co-directors Egil Krogh Jr., and David R. Young not to talk about the break-in.

Ehrlichman, Bernard L. Barker, Eugenio R. Martinez and G. Gordon Liddy are charged with conspiring "to injure, oppress, threaten and intimidate Dr. Lewis J. Fielding" in the Sept. 3-4, 1971 break-in of his office.

Fielding had treated Daniel Ellsberg, the Rand Corporation analyst who had leaked the Pentagon Papers study of the Vietnam war to newspapers. The object of the burglary was to obtain files Fielding had refused to turn over to the FBI.

The government attempted to show, mainly through the testimony of Young, Krogh and E. Howard Hunt Jr., that in approving a "covert operation" Ehrlichman knew he was authorizing the break-in. The burglary, Sept. 3-4, 1971, was carried out by Barker and Martinez, under the direction of Liddy.

Meat prices--Part 4:

Hoarding will cut supply and drive prices back up

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Consumers plotting their shopping strategy will find lower meat prices for the next few weeks, but the bargains aren't likely to last unless the government can find a way of stopping inflation.

Anyone tempted to stock up now should remember that hoarding will eventually cut supply and simply drive the price right back up again.

Cattlemen recently withheld their beef from market because they weren't getting high enough prices for their livestock. They convinced the federal government to help with a $100-million purchase of beef and pork designed to give livestock producers a short-term shot in the arm and to convince consumers that meat was a good buy right now.

Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz keeps saying that meat is a good buy. He says Americans can't expect 55-cent-a-pound hamburger any more.

With a prod from the government, the National Association of Food Chains recently urged its members — retail stores — to feature beef and other meats. Advertisements indicate the price is coming down.

Administration officials hope that lower prices will encourage consumers to buy. That would bring to market the oversupply of meat that is on ranches and feedlots.

Once that meat has been sold, however, prices probably will rise again. The solution is to make it cheaper to produce the cow. That would mean the farmer could charge the packer less; the packer could charge the supermarket less; and the supermarket could charge you less — providing that inflation doesn't boost the cost of things like labor, rent and electricity.

In May, inflation was proceding at an annual rate of 13.2 per cent. At the same time, the government marketbasket — the amount it costs a hypothetical family of 3.2 persons for farm-produced food — was 19 per cent higher than a year ago. Food prices were up 1.1 per cent in May, although there was a slight decline for meat.

Even the government doesn't know for sure what will happen next. Administration experts and private economists agree, however, that it's going to take some time before the up and down pattern of meat prices evens out.

The Agriculture Department purchase of meat for school lunches won't have much real effect on the market. Officials say it represents the amount of meat produced in only two or three days. But they hope it will have a psychological effect on the consumer.

What does all this mean? Should you go out and fill the freezer full of beef?

The best advice seems to be: Buy what you need. But don't stock up with the idea of hoarding a year's supply.

That's what happened last year during the freeze on beef prices. Americans, hearing warnings of withholding by cattlemen, bought heavily and the buying created a shortage.

The same thing could happen again.

Lower meat prices over the long run — and that means up to two years — depend on lower feed pices. And lower feed prices depend on more grain.

The Agriculture Department said last Monday that there will be record corn and wheat harvests this year, but they said the crops won't be as big as had been predicted.

There were record corn and grain harvests last year, too. Why, then, is the price of feed grains soaring?

Exports are one reason.

In the wake of the Russian wheat deal in the summer of 1972, the price of grain doubled in a year. Farmers who had sold their wheat for about $1.50 a bushel before the Russian deal was announced were angry. They felt they had been cheated.

Last year and this year, they are holding on to the grain until they are sure they can get the highest possible price. Grain dealers in Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas say that farmers have sold only 10 to 20 per cent of the harvest so far this year, compared to 50 or 60 per cent in a normal year.

On June 18, the wheat was selling for $3.99 a bushel and it has been going up fairly steadily since then.

American cattlemen aren't the only ones competing for the wheat and corn. Steadily rising demand around the world has meant a better market for U.S. farm exports and higher prices at home.

The Nixon administration wants to continue exporting farm products. The government sees exports as a way to freer world trade and reduced tariffs. It also sees the exports as a way to create a favorable balance of trade — getting more money for U.S. products than Americans spend for foreign goods.

North American eating habits account for the consumption of about a ton of grain a year per capita. One hundred fifty pounds of that is eaten as grain products; the rest is fed to cattle and indirectly consumed in meat. In the poorer countries, each person consumes about 400 pounds of grain a year — most of it directly.

As the poorer countries get richer, however, their people want better food — more meat, less rice. The demand increases again.

Experts who study world-wide trends in food and population say Americans are simply going to have to change their way of living and get used to eating less beef if the world is to have enough food.

DAEOC accused of not following federal policies

NEW MADRID — Charges of failure to follow federal policies and guidelines in the administration of the Delta Area Head Start program have been leveled against the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation (DAEOC) board of directors.

The charges stem from the attempted dismissal in December 1973 of John Porter of Kennett, social service director for the Delta Head Start program.

Three New Madrid residents, Mrs. Helen Tollison, Mrs. Rita Janowitz and Mrs. Carol Bixler, met recently with Missouri Lt. Gov. William C. Phelps in Cape Girardeau to see if he could give assistance in getting some problems resolved within the Head Start program.

Mrs. Tollison said Phelps told them that since the matter involved a federally funded program and he represents only the state, he could not himself be actively involved, but would get the information to those who could.

According to Mrs. Tollison, Porter, who has worked in the Head Start program since it was established over seven years ago, was notified early in December, 1973 that his employment would be terminated on Dec. 31. The notice was given in a letter from A. R. Meyer, dean of instruction at Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau. At that time the university was the designated agency responsible for the administration of the Head Start program. However, later in the month, administrative responsibilities were assumed by DAEOC in Portageville.

The action to dismiss Porter, Mrs. Tollison said, was taken by the DAEOC board without first advising, consulting or receiving approval from the Area Policy Council. Mrs. Tollison explained that according to federal guidelines, the APC must approve or disapprove the hiring and firing of Head Start staff personnel.

The 33- member APC board is composed of two community representatives from each of the six counties. One of the members is appointed by the county court and the other is designated by the welfare department. The other 21 members represent each of the Head Start centers.

The APC board is the governing body of the Head Start program and meets monthly at the area level to transact business in line with the wishes of participating Head Start parents in each of the centers.

Mrs. Tollison said at its March meeting the Head Start APC had placed all members of the central office staff on permanent employment, which included Porter.

On March 26, the DAEOC board voted to place all central office staff on permanent employment except the fiscal officer, social service director, a bookkeeper and the executive secretary pending consultation with the APC.

"The APC has never voted to dismiss Porter, but to the contrary, has found that he has performed his duties well and there have been no reasons to cause his dismissal," Mrs. Tollison said.

She stated the DAEOC board has ignored the APC and in April, without consulting APC, a newspaper ad was published for a week which announced that the Head Start social service director's job was available.

"The position is not vacant, yet the DAEOC board is continuing to review applicants , which is a direct violation of the federal guidelines and policies," Mrs. Tollison said.

Mrs. Tollison described Porter as the "backbone" of the Head Start program and said he stood pat on following the federal policies and guidelines. "He informed the parents of what their powers were and told them what input they were supposed to have in the program," she said.

"I can't believe that the DAEOC board is too interested in the Head Start program's directions. The board has failed to have a quorum present at two recent meetings and has been unable to transact any business. It's prime purpose seems to be to fire John Porter," she said.

Mrs. Tollison further commented that money was included in the Head Start budget for paying unemployment insurance to Head Start employes, but the employes who are not working during the summer are not receiving it. She said no explanation has been given by DAEOC why the unemployment insurance isn't being received by the employes.

The DAEOC board membership includes four persons from each of the following counties:

Scott — Frank Ferrell, Lynn Ingram, Donald Biggs and Elmer Russell.

New Madrid — Doyle Hicks, Ray Melton, Eugene Cross and Tom Jennings.

Pemiscot — Romney Brockett, D. J. Meredith, Floyd Drew and Mrs. Jimmie Jackson Pointer.

Mississippi — Hunt Welborn, John Clevidence, Charles Williams and Mrs. Berniece Bruce.

Stoddard — Dale Shumaker, Bill Rhodes, Andrew Cain and Paul Schuerenberg.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

The train of failure usually runs on the tracks of laziness.

* * *

Most Americans have been appalled with the criminal violence which has been much in the news lately. Kidnapings and holding for ransom have become quite popular. This form of crime was not so attractive when the death sentence was the penalty for kidnaping.

To judge the effect of penalties on crime reduction, airplane skyjacking offers a good example. Between 1968 and 1972 there were 147 attempted skyjackings in the U.S., and 91 were successful. Then came tougher rules and penalties and skyjacking virtually ended. The last successful skyjacking of a U. S. domestic airliner occurred on November 10, 1972.This does not mean no one tried. During 1973, some 3,500 passengers were prevented from boarding their aircraft at U. S. terminals. Over 3,000 were arrested and, according to U. S. News & World Report, some "...60,000 weapons or potential weapons were seized, including 2,162 guns and 23,280 knives."

The lesson is plain. If society wants to stop violent people from committing atrocities, law enforcement has to be beefed up, and the fear of apprehension and punishment has to be felt by those who would commit crime. That is the only way to stop them.

According to the "Appliance Service News," "Although most people will never be exposed to a gas leak in the home, the American Gas Association reports that safety precautions have been taken to insure that such leaks can be detected by smell. Natural gas is odorless, so a distinctive scent has been added. To enable citizens and their children to recognize this odor, many gas utilities are distributing sample cards impregnated with the scent."

LAND USE BILL IS DEAD

A proposed environmental law, known as the "land use" bill, apparently died in the House of Representatives at Washington, when it refused by a vote of 211 to 204 to take it up for discussion.

It would have provided $800 million to help the states and local governments devise means for planning the wisest use of their land and other resources.

It inspired considerable fear and strong opposition in this and other rural areas, where many residents suspected it might be the entering wedge for the government to tell any of us how we could use our private property.

We don't know. We never had a copy of the bill and had no chance to study it, therefore we never expressed an opinion.

It was originated by environmentalists who wanted to stop the widespread rape of our forests, our waters and our land through uncontrolled cutting of timber pollution of our lakes and streams by the big industrial plants, devastation of our farming areas by strip mining.

If we can get a bill that will control those, and at the same time protect the private landowner against crippling government regulation, we believe it is a necessary law.

TAX CHANGES? YES, BUT ...

How does the public consider it is treated by the government at taxpaying time — fairly or unfairly?

If they had their druthers, would Americans rather see changes in the federal income tax laws aimed at assuring that each person pays his fair share, or would they prefer a simplication of the calculations involved in filling out Form 1040?

These and other questions were asked recently of a representative sample of 2,073 persons age 18 and above in a nationwide survey conducted by Opinion Research Corp. of Princeton. The survey was commissioned by H&R Block, Inc., one of the nation's largest firms specializing in preparing income tax returns.

On the first question, the survey found that the majority felt that present federal income tax laws were fair to them personally, but about the same number believed the laws were unfair to the "average" taxpayer.

Middle- income people were most often named as paying "more than their fair share," followed by people with low incomes. Last named were people in the upper-income brackets. In a direct comparison with the upper-income taxpayer, the middle-income taxpayer was seen to be unfairly treated by an overwhelmingly majority — 87 per cent — of the public.

On the question of the need for an over-all reform, more than 75 per cent of the people surveyed believed that at least minor revisions were needed, while more than 50 per cent supported major revisions.

Nearly 75 per cent of the respondents agreed that present tax forms were "too complicated for the average person to understand. Nearly half the public sought professional assistance in filing their 1972 returns.

However, reforms aimed at ensuring fairness rather than simplication were favored by a margin of better than six to one — 79 per cent to 12 per cent. Yet the only provisions presently in the law that were opposed by as many as a fourth of the respondents were the depletion allowance (31 per cent) and the special tax treatment of investors in commercial real estate (25 per cent).

The survey also indicated that nearly half the public believes that simplification of the tax process — for example, using a flat tax rate on total income regardless of the source and with no exclusions or deductions — would result in unfair treatment because of differing personal circumstances could no longer be considered.

A majority opposed elimination of itemized deductions or joint returns. Among those deductions of which the average taxpayer currently can take advantage, only contributions to political candidates were singled out by a sizeable number (47 per cent) as a deduction which might be eliminated.

Not surprisingly, public reaction was favorable to changes in the tax laws which might reduce the amount of tax paid. An overwhelming majority (84 per cent) supported an increase in the present $750 allowance for dependents, and nearly as many (84 per cent) favored a deduction for at least some of the cost of a child's education.

Obviously, public opinion about the federal income tax is "mixed." But while all of us have our particular gripes about the system and ideas about specific reforms that should be made, there is no evidence of any grass- roots movement advocating really drastic changes.

LIFESAVING REALISM

Top government officials, as well as lawmakers, are beginning to face the fact that realism is no less important than environmentalism. This became evident as government leaders testified before a congressional committee on energy crisis "before the end of the decade." Interior Secretary Morton said the public must be made aware of the energy "crisis and the urgent need to take action now." Dr. Edward E. David, Jr., science adviser to the President, said that "arbitrary curtailment" of energy is both unnecessary and undesirable. Many other energy experts testified in a similar vein.

Among them were spokesmen for the investor-owned electric industry. One of the latter, Mr. W. donham Crawford, president of the Edison Electric Institute, emphasized that "... any new government policy should be so framed that the need for energy is given equal consideration with the nation's justifiable concern for the environment." He stressed what other utility industry people have said: "an abundance of electric energy" is required to solve many domestic problems, including supplying food for future generations; rebuilding cities and providing mass transportation and assuring fresh water supplies.

Stop- everything environmentalism has become a miasmic swamp from which the nation must extricate itse or face catastrophe. The kin of realism that pervaded in th congressional hearings offe hope of an awakening to th dangers.

He also visited smalle rural towns and villages looking for evidence oppression or a "climate fear" or any of the othe conditions so widely reporte in the world press.

He found nothing of th kind, seeing fewer policeme and soldiers on the streets tha is customary n this country finding complete freedom o speech and of the press -- bu no support whatever fo Allende. Not only did th Chilean army's move agains him have overwhelmin popular backing, Marshne learned, but the main questio people asked was why th army had waited so long.

LOST LUGGAGE

PARIS — One of the biggest problems of air travel is getting your luggage back at the end of the trip. For some reason more luggage is being lost now than ever before, and it's quite a headache for the airlines -- not to mention the people who are flying.

What makes the whole thing mysterious is that if you're traveling with your wife the airlines somehow manage to only lose (ital) her (unital) bags, the ones she absolutely needs if she is going to survive the trip.

There isn't a husband who has ever flown by air who hasn't faced this situation.

You get off the plane dog tired and wait at the baggage gate. The carousel keeps turning and turning with everyone's luggage. You have all your bags in a matter of minutes. Your wife gets all her bags except for one -- the large garment bag with all her dresses, costume jewelry and underthings. You wait an hour staring at the carousel hoping against hope it will be the last piece of baggage off the plane. You don't dare speak to your wife. She finally speaks to you, "They lost my bag."

"I guess they did."

"What are you going to do about it?" she says, her lips pursed as if she's going to let out a scream.

"I am going to do (ital) something (unital) about it," you say, knowing in your heart there isn't a damn thing you can do. But you have to show some machismo. You go up to a man in uniform. "See here, sir," you say in your sternest voice. "You people have lost my wife's bag."

The man looks surprised. "I'm sorry, I'm the pilot of the plane."

There is another official-looking man with a badge on his chest. "Sir," you say, "you people have committed one of the gravest crimes known to tourism. You have lost the luggage of an honest woman. Unless you produce my wife's bag in the next 30 minutes I shall have to report you to the president of your company."

"I'm a customs inspector," the man replies. "Go talk to someone from the airline."

Your wife who is over in the corner twisting her handkerchief asks, "What did they say?"

"I'm narrowing it down," you say. "The pilot of the plane doesn't know where your bag is and neither does the customs service. So it must be someone else."

You are directed to a counter where one lone clerk is trying to cope with a large crowd of angry husbands. It is obviously the lost- luggage counter because all the women are huddled nearby wailing and tearing their clothes.

The clerk, hired for his masochistic tendencies, is smiling as he fills out long sheets of paper taking descriptions of the lost bags.

You get to the counter and ask the stupidenst question any air traveler can pose: "Where is my wife's bag?"

The masochist smiles "New Delhi, Bali, Rio De Janeiro. It could be anywhere."

"I have a good mind to slug you," you say.

"Oh, would you please?" he says, "Most people just shout at me, but very few of them really hit me."

"I wouldn't give you the satisfaction. What are we supposed to do now?"

"Why don't you go to your hotel and get a good night's sleep? If we find your luggage, we'll have it delivered."

"Suppose it's never found?"

"Then you can come back here and I'll fill out another form."

You return to your wife. "Well," you say, "it's no problem. They know exactly where the bag is and you'll have it in the morning."

This calms her down until we get to the hotel. Then you make a mistake. As she's crawling into bed you ask, "Where's your nightie?"

And she lets out a scream that can be heard all over the roofs of Paris.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Beating the Indians

WASHINGTON — No fortress of the early West could compare with the bastion of bureaucracy that now holds the Indians at bay. With paperwork instead of fireworks, the bureaucrats who man the Bureau of Indian Affairs have overpowered the Indians more completely than the cavalry ever did.

Twenty months ago, a few frustrated Indians raided the BIA files and triumphantly bore off hundreds of cartons of the hated papers. The aggrieved Indians showed us the stolen files, which provided documentary proof of the neglect and betrayal that have characterized the white man's conduct toward the Indian.

We wrote a series of columns citing evidence from the documents that the BIA had helped white exploiters cheat the Indians out of their water, timber and mineral rights.

We advised the Indians, nevertheless, to abandon their futile raids and sieges and to fight back instead in the hearing rooms of Congress. We accompanied them to Capitol Hill where we testified in their behalf.

Yet today the BIA is as invulnerable and invincible as ever.

For instance, the BIA administers the tribal lands of the Shoshone- Bannock Indians who own some of the nation's finest potato acreage at Ft. Hall, Idaho. The BIA leases the best of this Indian land to corporate farmers for $15.36 an acre, which brings the Shoshone- Bannocks a return of less than two per cent of the harvest.

Yet neighboring landowners, who lease their land to potato growers, get 30 to 40 per cent of the take. The private landowners have shared with the growers in the great potato prosperity, as prices have soared from $1.80 to $6.80 a bushel since 1970.

Still the bureaucrats at the BIA, unmoved by the Indian appeals for the profit- sharing, continue to collect the same fixed price for the Indians as the corporate farmers paid before the price explosion.

The corporate tenants also leave the land bare during the winter. This erodes the soil, which runs off and pollutes the trout streams. Under the law, an environmental impact study should be made. But the local BIA officials have refused.

"We've made our own informal assessment," said Hiram Olney, the local BIA superintendent, "and determinedd that a full- blown environmental study is not needed." This is another decision which benefits the corporate tenants instead of the Indian landowners.

The bureaucrats claim that the sprinkler systems on Indian land and a tribal ban against the use of certain chemicals make the land more costly for the white tenants to farm. It is true that the tribe banned chemicals, which seeped into the streams and killed the fish. The aerial spraying also made the Indians ill.

But Jack G. Peterson, an agricultural economist who has spent two years in Ft. Hall, contends that the Indian restrictions don't increase costs at all. Nor have the bureaucrats produced any statistics to support their claim that the chemical ban has reduced crop yields.

In any event, any profit-sharing arrangements, presumably, would permit the corporate growers to deduct legitimate costs.

The BIA claims the Indians prefer the $15.36 set rate, rather than gamble on a percentage of the profits, because "they're afraid of the high risk." Yet under profit sharing, even a poor crop would earn the Indians more than the dirt- cheap, fixed- rate leases.

Peterson tells us he has heard BIA officials warn tribal members against profit sharing. "If your tenant doesn't grow any potatoes, you don't get any money," he has heard them threaten.

This is all too typical of BIA tactics, which seem calculated to con the Indian out of their legitimate earnings. It follows the BIA tradition of favoring white profiteers over the victimized Indians.

But the confused Shoshone-Bannocks finally got wise to their BIA administrators and sent a resolutuion to Washington protesting "the inequitable manner in which tribal ... lands have been leased by federal government." The tribal leaders demanded "an immediate investigation" by the secretary of the interior. But their complaints so far have been ignored.

The General Accounting Office, meanwhile, has conducted an investigation of the Shoshone- Bannock ripoff for Congress. But the unreleased report was screened by BIA officials before it reached Capitol Hill. Although it largely whitewahses the BIA, it confirms that the $15.36- an-acre the Indians are paid is only a fraction of what their white neighbors are earning from the potato boom.

Footnote: In fairness to Interior Secretary Rogers Morton, he has recently sided with the Mohave and Cheyenne Indians in controversies over Indian rights. His rulings have been imposed upon the BIA, which is under his jurisdiction.

WASHINGTON WHIRL: Rep. James Symington, D-Mo., kicked Sen. Quentin Burdick, D-N.D., in the stomach the other day, knocking the wind out of him. But it was all in good sport. The two legislators were sparring in karate class ... Ex- White House investigator Jack Caulfield conceded to senators behind closed doors that he asked Assistant Attorney General Henry Petersen to try to link ex-Interior Secretary Steward Udall and ex-McGovern fund-raiser Henry Kimelman to the Mafia. Petersen "indicated he would watch it," Caulfield secretly testified. But he didn't think anything ever came of it, he said ... The Republican National Committee paid $1,625 to rent 50,000 names from the mailing list of the untraconservative Liberty Lobby during a recent fund-raising drive. We have reported in the past that the Liberty Lobby has been infiltrated by Nazis who revere the memory of Adolf Hitler.

Inside Labor

Fear of Crackdown: Government Orders over 100 Unions to Open For Tens of Thousands of Blacks -- or Else ...

WASHINGTON — On the black labor- hiring front this is the year of the quota and crackdown. Unprecedently, federal authorities have just warned leaders of over 100 construction locals and some joint councils to open their unions, admit as many as 25 to 30 per cent new black, Puerto Rican and other minority members and then get them on the job.

This edict came from the Office of Federal Contract Compliance (OFCC) -- which monitors the ethnic and racial employment spread of contractors doing scores of billions of dollars worth of business annually with the U.S. government. If the unions which have just been admonished -- and the glaziers, carpenters, bricklayers, and electrical workers appear to be the most numerous -- ignore the OFCC directive it can initiate a "pattern and practice" suit against the union.

The unions and their leaders could then be brought into the federal courts to show cause why they shouldn't be punished for violating Executive Order 11246 (non-discrimination). The federal judiciary could then order the unions to comply -- and if defied, could lay heavy fines on the leaders personally and on the union treasuries as well.

Contractors dealing with these unions also have been warned. They can be more heavily hit. Their contracts with the federal government can be ripped up. They can be fined. They can be "debarred," that is, prevented from future bidding on U.S. projects or dealing with any federal department or agency. And this goes right through to any corporate subsidiary.

Much of this action is in construction work. But not all. For the first time, for example, the OFCC, headed by Philip Davis, has asked the Treasury Department to move against a bank for allegedly violating the executive order. Thus Treasury has asked the bank, in Pittsburgh, to show cause why it should not be punished for not hiring enough minority employes. Actual punishment could be mighty costly -- its status as a lending institution is in jeopardy.

Further, the OFCC also has the Department of Defense moving on similar lines against four medium- sized contractors whose names are being whithheld for a while.

"This is the year of the crackdown," said a high government source. "We're operative. We mean business. We're knocking on doors."

If there is a full follow-through, this could revolutionize the American labor movement. Just look at the warning the OFCC gave to the hundred locals and three Carpenters Joint Councils. Upping the black, Spanish-surnamed, Oriental, American Indian and female membership of these construction unions to 25 or 30 per cent of the membership means adding ten of thousands of new dues payers. It means getting them on the job --giving them "man hours" (is there a women's hour, now?) on the construction site. It means bumping workers with more years in the field, since tight seniority lists are comparatively rare in the construction trades.

It means tough resistance by the rank and file and their local leaders. It means court tests right up to the high bench. It means that this is the moment of truth on the issue: can the U.S. government impose such quotas?

The government, in chastising the locals and joint councils, said they had not shown good faith in attempting to meet minority work goals in 21 city, county and state areas. They had not done much with their voluntary hometown plans for absorbing the minorities -- most of whom are black. So the accused unions have moved from under the voluntary action Part One of federal construction bed regulations to the imposed requirements of Part Two.

Now the unions have rigid "mandatory minority hiring goals." These are quotas. And although they range between 25 and 30 per cent minority union membership -- they can run higher.

As the OFCC sees it, oddly enough, the worst violators are locals in Northern Cities such as Boston and Cleveland -- which have dense black populations. Kansas City, one of the nation's biggest construction areas, runs next.

All this showed up in an "audit" of 46 voluntary hometown plans running from 1973 into this year. Says one governemnt official: "They just didn't show good faith. Now they'll have to, or we'll just take them into court."

Actually it's the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission which now has the authority to take court action though each federal department such as Treasury and the Defense Department can demand to know why one of its contractors or fund recipients (Federal Insurance in the case of the bank) isn't obeying the executive order.

On the construction front, quotas certainly will be fought by the labor leaders. In New York City, which was not one of those chided, the "goal" is a 26 per cent level of minority construction workers, mostly blacks and Puerto Ricans. Well, the construction unions there are politically powerful. They're not about to yield. They report openings for 1,000 minority jobs, instead of taking on one black or Puerto Rican apprentice for every three whites hired. And the apprenticeships are the key to working up the union pipeline into the $10- an- hour jobs.

So it does look like the year of the crackdown.

Miss Beth Hayes is June bride of Loy Gene Newell

MORLEY — The United Pentecostal Church was the setting June 8 for the 7 o'clock wedding of Miss Beth Sheba Hayes and Loy Gene Newell.

The bride is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ray of Morley, and the groom is the son of Mrs. Dessie Newell of Oak Ridge and the late John Newell.

The Rev. Larry Spicer performed the double- ring evening ceremony.

A unity candle arrangement and three candelabra, which held tall, white tapers, decorated the altar.

Preceding the bride and her grandfather, who gave her in marriage, were Mrs. Lynn Mills of Vanduser, matron of honor and Miss Karen Newell of Oak Ridge, sister of the groom, and Mrs. Tom Barnett of Sikeston, bridesmaids.

Candlelighters were the groom's nieces, Miss Tina Kimbel and Miss Sarah Pulliam. Miss Paula Kimbel, niece of the groom, served as flower girl.

Miss Martha Jackson of Morley played pre- nuptial music and accompanied Miss Elaine Jackson of Morley as she sang, "Whither Thou Goest," "More" and "The Wedding Prayer".

The bride chose a formal gown of white sheerganza and imported Chantilly lace. Lace defined the Mandarin neckline and adorned the empire bodice and full bishop sleeves. A deep border of lace encircled the flared A-line skirt. A chapel- length mantilla, trimmed with lace and held in place with a lace cap, completed the total look. The bride carried a cascade of white wild roses, white carnations and pink apple blossoms, and satin streamers tied in lovers' knots.

The matron of honor wore a dark pink floor-length dress which had long sleeves and an empire waist accented with trim. The bridesmaids wore medium pink dresses like the one worn by the matron of honor. The matron of honor and bridesmaids carried nosegays of pink carnations and white apple blossoms with streamers to match the color of their dresses. White wide- brimmed hats accented with trim like that on the dresses completed their outfits.

The flower girl and candlelighters wore light pink floor- length dresses similar to those worn by the attendants. The flower girl carried a basket of white and pink rose petals, and the candlelighters wore corsages of light pink carnations.

Michael Kester of Jackson, nephew of the groom, was ringbearer.

Johnny Newell of Jackson served his brother as best man. Steve Moore of Millersville and the Rev. Jerry Bachelder of Sikeston were groomsmen. Dennis Craft of Jackson and Tom Barnett of Sikeston seated the guests.

A reception followed the ceremony in the basement of the church. Miss Phyllis Trucks, cousin of the bride, presided at the guestbook, and guests were served by Mrs. Larry Griffin, Mrs. Susan Jones and Miss Trucks.

Newell is employed by Perryville Packing Co. in Perryville.

Following a honeymoon trip to an undisclosed location, the couple now lives on Perryville Route Two.

The Rev. W. H. Worth, pastor, officiated at the double-ring, candlelight service.

The altar was decorated with an archway, entwined candleabras with white tapers and baskets of white gladiolas.

Miss Lee Clayton of Sikeston, pianist, played prenuptial music and accompanied Mrs. Barbara Shirey of Oran as she sang "There is Love" and "For All We Know" as the couple knelt at the kneeling bench.

Preceeding the bride were candlelighters Miss Barbara Knuckles and Ronnie Towe, brother of the bride.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Gary Towe. She wore a gown fashioned of polyester crystal. The transparent looking bodice was made of imported chantilly lace, highlighted by cardinal sleeves and a mandarin neckline. The long fitted undersleeves were accented by tiny self-covered buttons. The sleeves and neckline were edged in crystal ruffling. The fitted A-line skirt fell into large folds in back to make the chapel-length train. Chantilly lace and crystal ruffling banded the skirt and train.

The bride's three-tier veil was of imported English silk illusion and was attached to a contour headpiece. Her bouquet was of white apple blossoms with white streamers.

As the bride entered, she presented her mother with a long stemmed red rose, and after the ceremony, she presented her new mother-in-law a similar rose.

Maid of honor was Miss Barbara Towe of Morehouse, sister of the bride; and bridesmaids were Miss Debbie Hodgkiss of Bertrand, sister of the groom, Miss Debbie Clark of Sikeston and Miss Sharon Knuckles of Morehouse.

All the bride's attendants wore blue floor-length floral gowns and blue veils. They carried nosegays of white and blue apple blossoms.

Ann Landers

Florida man loves his 'watch pig'

Dear Ann Landers: I'm sure a lot of people thought you'd been hornswoggled when you printed that letter from the man who wanted to know if it was true that pigs were smarter than dogs. He needed an animal to guard the house and was considering a "watch pig."

I just read something in a journal that convinced me the letter was on the level.

A man named Anderson in Grass Key, Florida, has a pet pig named Packer. Packer is housebroken. When he wants to go outside he stands by the kitchen door and oinks.

Anderson says Pack is much smarter than any cat or dog he has ever owned. Also he is the hungriest. Pack eats 15 pounds of cracked corn and barley every day, which adds five pounds to his weight. The pig now weighs 350 pounds. Eventually he'll weigh 800. "Just more of him to love," smiled Mr. Anderson.

I hope you'll print this. It will surprise many people. -- Daily Ann Fan

Dear Daily: Well, here's your letter. And you can count me among those who were "surprised." I wonder if Mr. Anderson will feel the same about Pack when he weighs 800 pounds.

I notice nothing was said about a Mrs. Anderson. I'll bet 15 pounds of cracked corn he's a bachelor.

Dear Ann Landers: Can you tell me how to get a guy who is really an A-Number-One-All-Around-Handy-Man off his lazy rear end? He makes a good living and I don't have to work, but I can't get the big lug to finish a project. Here's the state of affairs:

1. He took a lovely antique rocking chair apart because it was a little off kilter. I begged him to leave it alone, but no, he insisted on "fixing" it. The rocker is 114 years old, a real beauty. I'd love to use it but it's dismantled in the corner of the storage room.

2. He bought equipment and material for a tile patio five months ago. It's still in the garage.

3. Three unfinished bookcases he promised to paint and put in his study are in the storage room with the rocking chair.

4. He bought two huge bags of lawn seed. They are in the garage with the lumber for the patio cover.

There's plenty more but I don't want to bore you. What can I do with a man like this? Whenever I speak to him about his unfinished projects he calls me a nag and says, "please get off my back." I await your words of wisdom in our local paper. -- Big Mama

Dear Mama: Sorry, there is no sure way to get an immature man who is drowning in a sea of unfinished projects "off his lazy rear end." If it's any comfort to you, I hear from dozens of women who are struggling with the same problem. I'll tell you what I tell them: Stop nagging. Give him a deadline and tell him if he doesn't meet it you'll hire the work done. Then go ahead and do it.

When he sees the bills, THAT might get him off his lazy rear end.

Cardinals take Cincinnati 3-2

CINCINNATI (AP) — Jim Dwyer's tie-breaking two-run pinch single in the eighth inning sparked the St. Louis Cardinals to a 3-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Friday night.

Joe Torre opened the inning with an infield hit when third baseman Dan Driessen fell down trying to field his grounder. Ted Simmons doubled Torre to third, and Clay Carroll relieved Cincinnati starter Fred Norman, 8-7.

Carroll issued an intentional walk to Bake McBride, loading the bases, and Ken Reitz forced Torre at the plate before Dwyer, recently recalled from the minors, delivered a single to center. He was batting for relief pitcher Rich Folkers.

The Reds got their first run against Alan Foster in the first inning when Johnny Bench's bases-loaded, checked-swing grounder scored Pete Rose, who had singled and moved around to third on consecutive walks.

The Cards tied the game 1-1 in the seventh on Lou Brock's run-scoring single after Reitz opened the inning with a ground-rule double and went to third on Tim McCarver's pinch single.

Foster left for a pinch hitter in the sixth and Folkers picked up the win by pitching a scoreless seventh inning. Al Hrabosky and Mke Garman finished up.

Expos Jackson, Carew win

MONTREAL (AP) — Barry Foote, Mike Jorgensen and Ken Singleton blasted home runs, powering the Montreal Expos to an 11-6 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers in the first game of a twi-night double - header Friday.

The Expos tagged Dodger starter Al Downing, 2-3, for a run in each of the first three innings and then chased the left-hander with a three-run fourth, two of the runs on Bob Bailey's bases-loaded single.

Los Angeles came back with three runs in the fifth when Joe Ferguson led off with his 10th homer of the baseball season and Bill Buckner crashed a two-run double.

Carew maintains a huge lead over runner-up Cookie Rojas of Kansas City, 1,187,760 to 445,081.

Boston's Carlton Fisk, sidelined last week with a knee injury, leads the catchers with 718,129 ballots to 487,054 for New York's Thurman Munson.

Chris Evert wins

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Chris Evert, an icy tennis killer in pink ruffles and bows, became the new Wimbledon queen Friday while a remarkable 39-year-old relic named Ken Rosewall took a big step toward the men's crown.

Just a sprite of a man at 5 foot 7 and 142 pounds whose tennis glories were behind him, the Australian stood two sets down and 3-5 in the third—and even faced one match point— before rallying for a magnificent 6-8, 4-6, 9-8, 6-1, 6-3 victory over giant Stan Smith in a men's semifinal.

The dramatic center-court triumph—achieved before an ecstatic, wildly cheering gallery of 14,000—sent the Sydney stroke-master into Saturday's final round against America's 21-year-old Jimmy Connors.

Connors, upon learning of his opponent after methodically cutting down U.S. teammate Dick Stockton, 4-6, 6-2, 6-3, 6-4, raised his eyebrows in surprise and commented: "How do you play a legend?"

Rosewall has been a runnerup three times but never a winner here in 23 years of Wimbledons.

The petite Miss Evert, at 19 the second-youngest lady to win this title in modern times, literally crushed Olga Morozova, her doubles partner and newfound friend from Moscow, 6-0, 6-4.

NFL players try swinging Dolphins to join strike

By The Associated Press

Striking National Football League players, hoping to swing the balking Miami Dolphins to their side Friday night, won a victory in San Diego earlier in the day when linebacker Dan Goode, a Chargers' firstround draft choice, joined the picket line.

Striking National Football League players, hoping to swing the balking Miami Dolphins to their side Friday night, won a victory in San Diego earlier in the day when linebacker Don Goode, a Chargers' firstround draft choice, joined the picket line.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFL Players Association, flew to Miami to talk with the Super Bowl champions, a few of whom have said they would cross the union's picket line so they could play against the College All-Stars in Chicago on July 26.

A failure by some key Dolphins to honor the union's picket line could have a weakening effect on the striking players, who threaten to wipe out the NFL's exhibition season if their demands for freedom from binding contracts are not met.

And in another development, the players' union prepared to set up its second picket line on Saturday in Huntsville, Tex., where the Houston Oilers become the second of the 26 NFL teams to open training camp for rookies and free agents. Team officials said they expected 104 of the players in camp Saturday.

Elliott Bowers, President of San Houston State, site of the Oilers camp, said an NFLPA representative in Washington assure him there would be no problems for the school.

"I've been assured by both sides that this will be a peaceful thing," said Dr. Bowers. "This is something between the owners and veterans and unless we're called on to protect our own people and our property, we'll stay out of it."

Unlike the Chargers' training site at U.S. International University, where the campus is fenced off and one main gate was designated as the picket area, Sam Houston State's campus is wide open, with city streets running throughout the campus.

"We can't rope off public streets so we don't know yet what guidelines will be set up until the Management Council people get here," an Oiler official said.

In San Diego, Goode became the second Charger — joining free agent wide receiver Coleman Zeno — to walk out of camp and join the picketing veterans.

They went on strike on Monday over a number of freedom issues, including the right to negotiate with any team they wish and the right to veto trades.

Litton says farmer, consumer struggle must be stopped

ST. LOUIS ---"Pitting farmers and consumers against each other for political reasons must be stopped," Jerry Litton of Chillicothe, U.S. Representative from Missouri's Sixth District, warned as he addressed the Sixth District Production Credit Association Director's Conference June 24 -25 in St. Louis.

Rep. Litton said the current economic disaster, which is bankrupting thousands of farmers and feeders today, was caused by last year's food price freeze. Litton, a freshman member of Congress, has been trying to bring rural and urban America closer together. "It is imperative that agriculture show urban America what it is that encourages or discourages a farmer from producing more or less food, and how this establishes the price of food," Litton said.

Dr. Donald B. Roark, deputy governor of the Farm Credit Administration echoed Litton's comments by saying,"There are other people in highly visible positions of world leadership who are concerned about the price of food only as it affects the balance of payments."

Dr. Roark went on to stress the critical position the world food situation is in. "Seventy -five million people are born each year around the world. Of this number, 45 million are born in countries unable to feed their growing population," Roark said.

William R. Crotty of New York City, vice president of Citicorp, spoke about the world wide money demand and supply situation. He stated that when the supply of money outruns the supply of goods, there is inflation, and when the demand for credit exceeds the supply, interest rates rise. The supply of money in nations around the world is tight, Crotty said, and he expects interest rates to continue as they are now for some time until new anti -inflation programs have a chance to take effect.

Dr. Kenneth Naden of Washington D.C., chief executive officer of the national council of Farmer Cooperatives, who also addressed the convention, said "The American people have a love -hate relationship with inflation. We hate inflation, but love everything that causes it. Inasmuch as the public wants strong statements opposing inflation, and wants actions which induce inflation, we shall, no doubt, continue to have both."

Speaking of the current situations, Dr. Naden stated, "No one gives you (farmers) a fair price just because you deserve it. You have to have sufficient economic, bargaining and marketing power to get the prices you deserve."

The Sikeston Production Credit Association serves Scott, New Madrid, Mississippi, Stoddard, Cape Girardeau, Butler and Bollinger counties. In 1973 it loaned over $52 million to about 2,000 farmers.

Robert Wright, of Sikeston president of the association, stated in the association's annual report, "The association belongs to the membership it serves" and feels and that "PCA has been a vital factor in the success of Southeast Missouri agriculture in the past and will contribute even more in meeting the challenges of the future."

Silver Award winners

Ten Production Credit Association vice presidents and assistant vice presidents were presented Silver Awards for outstanding performance during 1973 at the Sixth District PCA Director's Conference June 24 -25 in St. Louis. Silver Award winners from Missouri were, from left, Bill Settles of Dexter. DeWain Adkison of Houston, Fred Alexander of Portageville, Ray Edmonds of Charleston, T.R. McGuire of St. Louis who presented the awards, Gordon Hill of Sikeston and Ray Wade of Brookfield. McGurie is president of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of St. Louis.

PCA directors attend conference

Five Production Credit Association directors and their wives from the Sikeston PCA joined Robert A. Wright, president of the Sikeston Association, and his wife Laverne in attending the Sixth District PCA Director's Conference June 24 -25 in St. Louis.

Directors and wives attending the Sikeston Production Credit Association were Charles and Peggy Causey of Bloomfield, Gene and Marilyn Dement of Sikeston, Louis and Thelma Kalkbrenner of Poplar Bluff, Jimmy and Alberta Bishop of East Prairie and Ray and Carolyn Fowler of New Madrid.

The conference was attended by about 800 directors, officers and guests.

One highlight of the conference was the presentations of a series of awards by T.R. McGuire, president of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of St. Louis. Silver Awards were given to PCA assistant vice presidents for outstanding performance during 1973.

Four of the district's 10 Silver Awards recipients are from the Sikeston

PCA. They include Bill Settles of Dexter, Fred Alexander of Portageville, Gordon Hill of Sikeston and Ray Edmonds of Charleston.

"We are serving America's most dynamic and fastest growing industry -agriculture! More exciting things are happening today in agriculture then every before," McGuire said in his closing remarks to the directors, officers and guests attending the conference.

McGuire added that "by the end of June, the District's 44 Production Credit Associations will have more than $800 million outstanding in loans to nearly 40,000 farmers in the three states of Arkansas, Illinois and Missouri."

McGuire went on to list a series of significant achievements by the PCAs last year. They included: the greatest amount of credit ever extended in a single year -- more than $1.2 billion, the best earning record in PCA's history, the biggest volume increase in 15 years and the greatest total market penetration ever.

"Borrowed capital is, as of today, the farmer's very best input bargain, "McGuire said.

Also addressing the conference was Sixth District Rep. Jerry Litton of Chillicothe. See related story for the content of his remarks.

Lay-by herbicides advantage this year

By JOE H. SCOTT
Agronomy Specialist

PORTAGEVILLE - Crop conditions change rapidly in the Bootheel. About two weeks ago fields were too wet to work. Last week growers were irrigating cotton, soybeans and corn.

The hot weather seems to have helped the cotton crop as it is growing and has a better color. Also fields are much cleaner than two weeks ago.

Late-planted soybeans, which were planted last week, needed moisture for a good stand and older beans were showing moisture stress on some soils. Soybean cyst nematode symptons are showing up in fields that have a moisture stress.

Cotton is squaring and a few blooms have been reported. But I am afraid we are going to need a long growing season for some of the late planted cotton and cotton that has been damaged by sand and 2, 4-D.

Many cotton field have skippy stands. This will be a year when lay-by herbicides can be used to an advantage. Grass and weeds can be a problem at harvest and can result in lower grades. Diuron and Linuron can be used for late season weed control. Add a surfactant to lay-by sprays if have emerged weeds. Be sure to follow label recommendations. Fall seeded crops in cotton fields should be taken into consideration when apply herbicides late in the season.

Dr. Oscar Calvert and Dr. Charles Baldwin of the plant pathology department have prepared excellent tables giving suggested fungicide treatments for wheat and barley to control diseases on the crop to be planted this fall. You can get a copy at the local extension center.

The Missouri Seed Improvement Association is suggesting to their certified growers to treat wheat seed with a recommended fungicide. If seed is treated and then bagged be sure a tag is sewed on the bag showing that the seed is treated.

Wynard Aslin, executive secretary of the Missouri Seed Improvement Association, says there will be a shortage of registered seed of all wheat varieties this fall. This is due to two factors: A shortage of foundation seed last fall and low yields.

Wynard is asking registered seed growers not to sell any seed out of Missouri for the time being. He would like to make an estimate of number of bushels of registered seed of each variety of wheat available in the state and to get Missouri certified growers to contact registered seed producers so that they will have first chance at getting the registered seed.

Soybean applications for certification are due July 15. Growers who have planted late can send part of their application in now or drop the office in Columbia a note so that they will not be charged a penalty.

An artist is an oddball until he begins to sell — then he's a charming eccentric.

Post-emergence weed control tips offered

By THOMAS A. BROWN, Jr.
Area Agronomy Specialist

BLOOMFIELD - Numerous requests for information pertaining to post-emergence weed control in soybeans are coming to the University of Missouri Extension Center in Bloomfield.

Two herbicides including Dinoseb (Dinitro) and 2,4-DB (Butoxone or Butyrac) are recommended for post-emergence weed control treatments in soybeans, and if properly used, should control most weeds in beans throughout the season.

Dinoseb can be used at two different stages of soybean growth. Fair to good control of a variety of weeds including cocklebur, morning glory, pigweed, ragweed, smartweed, spiny sida, velvetleaf, carpetweed, barnyardgrass, crabgrass, giant foxtail, jimsonweed, lambsquarter, and coffeeweed can be expected from this chemical. It will not control fall panicum, johnsongrass, nutgrass, or wild cane.

Dinoseb can be used as an early post- emergence treatment when soybean plans are in the cotyledon stage (first pair of leaves or "seed leaves") but before the first true leaves, the second pair, open to expose the terminal bud. This treatment should be applied only when a flush of weeds comes up shortly after planting, and it can only be expected to control weeds that are up at the time of application. Crop injury may be expected if the temperature exceeds 85 degrees F. If the soybeans do not come up uniformly, varying degrees of injury may be the result.

Dinoseb is also, recommended for use as a post-emergence direct treatment from the time the beans are five inches tall up to first bloom. This treatment will control various annual broadleaved weeds that escape previously- used herbicides. The use of a surfactant mixed with this herbicide will improve its effectiveness. To avoid excessive crop injury, the spray must not be applied higher than one-half the height of soybean plants.

2,4-DB is also recommended for use at two different stages of soybean growth.

What's the law?

The case of the struggling neighbors

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Archie asked his neighbor and bosom buddy, George, to help him move a 500 pound freezer down into his basement. And to facilitate matters, Archie provided a dolly on which the freezer rested while the two struggling men slowly eased the freezer, step by step, into the basement.

The procedure followed by the two men was very simple. To prevent a too rapid descent, George stood above the freezer and pulled back on it while Archie, standing below, pushed upward on it.

Unfortunately, near the bottom of the staircase, a catastrostroke occurred. George asked Archie whether the freezer was resting securely and when Archie answered in the affirmative, George started to position himself on the next lower step. As he did so, however, the freezer started to slip forward to the chagrin of poor hapless Archie. And to prevent him from being mashed like a potato, George pulled back of the freezer with all of his strength.

The result? Archie was saved, George suffered a severe back derangement and another fast friendship bit the dust as George sued Archie for his injured back.

"It was all Archie's fault," insisted George in Court. "He told me the freezer was resting securely when it wan't."

"Some pal," responded Archie. "He saved me so he could sue me. Actually, however, he can't collect a penny. In being neighborly enough to help me move the freezer, he assumed the risk of possible injury."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make Archie pay for his neighbor's injured back?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that Archie had breached a duty of care that he owed to his neighbor, George. He had created an emergency situation, noted the judge, by carelessly permitting the freezer to slip forward when it was his responsibility to hold it in place.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor of
The Daily Standard:

Occasionally events sharpen one's appreciation of a good home in a good community full of good people. This is my "Fanfare To Sikeston" for the outpouring of love and concern which so many persons here and in Southeast Missouri have showered on our family during the recent illness and death of my husband. For so many to say "I Care" in so many ways is both humbling and sustaining. This is my letter of gratitude for immeasurable acts of kindness and sympathy which symbolize a good community of people who care.

Mrs. Keith Collins.

July 2, 1974

Mr. Editor -

Recently my brother returned to Sikeston from Kansas with his wife and daughter. My brother is about to leave for a 12- month tour of Korea. He loves his wife so much that to help her through this year he wrote this little poem for his wife Gail –

"BEST OF ALL"

Her hair was blond, her eyes were blue,
This beautiful woman I thought I knew,
I've made her happy, I've made her sad,
And yes alot of times I've made her mad,
I've done alot to this woman in my life,
But best of all I've made her my wife.

L. Jackman

Thank you sir for letting me share this small poem with all of Sikeston.

Russell Ryan

Editor
The Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Mo. 63801

Dear Sir:

If Mrs. Barbara Eagleton wants to see her husband reelected to the United States Senate, it would behoove her to do her "homework" concerning the Equal Rights Amendent. The ERA does not guarantee a woman's right to equal pay -- the Equal OPPORTUNITIES Act of 1964 has already done that. It does guarantee that women will register for the draft and serve in the military equally with men. And Mr. Eagleton, on October 18, 1973 joined with other Senators and voted for a Resolution to commit American blood and treasure to the Mideast war.

I will not give the full text of the Senate Resolution 189, but the key words in the Resolution are: (Quote) That it is the sense of the Senate to maintain Israel's deterrent strength be implemented by continuing to transfer to Israel, by whatsoever means necessary, Phantom aircraft and other equipment in the quantities needed by Israel to repel the aggressors. (End Quote

Commission sets meeting

JEFFERSON CITY – The Missouri State Highway Commission has scheduled its monthly meeting July 10 and 11 in the hearing room at the Highway Building.

Scheduled delegations will be heard by the Commission on July 10 and other commission business of a routine nature will be transacted.

On July 11 routine business not transacted on July 10th will be conducted.

WHATSISNAME?

MT. PROSPECT, Ill. (AP) – The name of O. B. Enebo, a sales representative for Addressograph Multigraph Corp. here, is very unusual.

Enebo's monicker is a palindrome – it reads the same frontwards and backwards.

Cifuentes said the boy, whom he would not identify, had been bitten last month by a rabid street dog in Mexico City. He said the boy recovered without medication apparently because he had antibodies in his bloodstream that fought the rabies infection.

Cifuentes said laboratory tests conducted at a state hospital established the boy did have rabies. If independent tests confirm the diagnosis, it would be only the third known case of a recovery from the disease — one of the most fatal known to man.

At present, 14 painful abdominal injections are needed to halt development of rabies in a human being after the person has been infected by a bite from a rabid animal.

Hayti council throws open annex issue

HAYTI - The Hayti City Council Monday night put it up to the people of Hayti to cedice if they want to increase the area of the city through annexation.

City Attorney James "Tick" Vickrey presented a resolution to the council calling for a special election to be held July 23 for the purpose of enabling the qualified voters to vote on the question of whether or not the corporate boundaries of Hayti should be extended.

The area in question is one mile east of the present city limits along Highway 84 to Park Road. The main reason for annexing the area is to allow the city at a later date provide water and sewer to residences and businesses in the area.

Several businesses have already located in the area along the highway.

In the American colonies, few homes or barns were complete until the weather-vane was in place. Artisans fashioned them of wood, and later of wrought iron, sheet metal and copper.

$400,000 2-year contract awarded for manpower plan

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Office of Comprehensive Health Planning has received a $400,000 two-year federal contract for development of a statewide health manpower plan, Gov. Christopher S. Bond said Friday.

The grant, awarded by the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, resulted from recommendations developed at a conference here last April.

"I am confident that through a coordinated statewide effort, Missouri will have a truly effective health manpower delivery system which will meet the health care needs of each citizen of our state," Bond said.

The state Office of Comprehensive Health Planning will study health manpower requirements and develop a plan to meet the needs.

The office will develop a communications link between hospitals, clinics, medical schools and the regional health manpower planning agencies.

The study will identify the health manpower situtaion in eight major occupational categories:

Medicine and osteopathy, dentistry, pharmacy, podiatry, optometry, veterinary medicine, nursing and allied health occupations.

Caruthersville awarded waste treatment grant

CARUTHERSVILLE - It has been announced in Washington D.C. that the environmental Protection Agency has awarded $71,250 grant to the city of Caruthersville for the preparation of facility plans for a waste treatment works project.

The total estimated cost of the project is $95,000 and the grant is made under the Waste Treatment Works program of the Environmental Protection Agency.

When contacted about this announcement, Mayor B. F. Rogers said "this is news to me" and that he hadn't received word on the matter yet.

"I'm sure it's true, though, and I would guess the grant is an advance for engineering work and the televising of sewers," the major said.

Rogers added that the project "will be completed". He said "just because we laid off Buescher- Frankenberg as consultants doesn't mean they have stopped on this project. They have a contract with the city concerning the sewer project and they will see it through."

Emerson to locate in Hayti

HAYTI - A new industry, Emerson Electric, is moving to Hayti, Mayor Fred Chaffin confirmed Tuesday. The firm will open a distribution center for motors.

Mayor Chaffin reported,

"I don't know too much about the details, when they will open and things like that, but they will be moving here.

"The distribution center will be located at the Federal Compress in Hayti at the south end of the plant. Two buildings involving roughly 80,000 square feet will be occupied. I understand about 20 people will be employed there," he added.

Two buildings have been leased from the Federal Compress by Emerson Electric for storage of the motors.

Pemiscot County to hold tax sale

CARUTHERSVILLE - The second three-year tax sale in Pemiscot County will be held Aug. 26 according to Pemiscot County Collector Roger Medlin. On that day, delinquent real estate property will be sold beginning at 10 a.m. on the front steps of the Pemiscot County Court House.

"The sale will involve about 100 pieces of property," Medlin said, "with a total estimated value of $70,000."

A listing of the pieces of property to be sold will be printed in the Hayti newspaper this year, the Missouri Herald, after being run in the two Caruthersville newspapers the past two years. The listings will be run July 26th, Aug. 1st, and Aug. 8th.

Property being sold is that of people who did not pay their taxes in 1971, 1972 and 1973. Last year, the 1969 and 1970 delinquent real estate property was sold, starting this county on the three year tax sale instead of the past four-year sale.

"One thing that has helped in the increase in personal tax collection is the publishing of the delinquent tax list in the local papers," Medlin said. "The people just don't want their names in the paper in that manner."

For those persons who did not pay their current taxes by March 1st of this year, they will face a stiffer penalty than those who did, the collector said.

"A delinquent real estate tax book will be prepared and the delinquent's name will be entered in this book," he said.

What this action means, Medlin said, is that those people who did not pay the amount of the tax by March 1st will not only have to pay the amount of the tax, but also a two per cent penalty, interest (which changes monthly), and a 25 cent charge for having his name on the tax book.

Spainhower is investing $50 million

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — State Treasurer James I. Spainhower said Friday he is investing $50 million of state funds in 311 banks in 84 Missouri counties.

He said his office will try to deposit another $50 million later this year. The banks will pay 8 per cent interest to the state.

The distribution is based on a formula which returns an amount to each county proportional to the amount paid by the county in state sales and income taxes.

When the amount designated for a county has been determined, the applications from the banks within that county be checked against the requirements of the formula and the amount available for deposit with each bank is established.

"Any bank in the state that reflects a community involvement by maintaining a loan-deposit ration of at least 50 per cent will receive its share of the money, providing it chooses to accept the deposit at the maximum rate of interest allowed by law," Spainhower said.

Queen Victoria sent some 500,000 pounds of chocolate as a Christmas present to British troops fighting the Boers in Africa, according to the National Geographic Society.
